House Flouts Roosevelt on CCC, Relief

Moves to Slash Budget for WPA, Set Limit on Camps Program.

Both Actions Tentative; Tydings Warns of New Depression.

By Robert C. Albright.

In a sudden economy fervor, the House yesterday dealt unexpected blows to the Administration's $1,500,000,000 relief program and the President's plan for a permanent CCC.

A House appropriations sub-committee voted 5 to 4 for a $500,000,000 slash in the 1938 WPA budget. A few minutes later, the House voted, 224 to 34, for a two-year limitation on the CCC program.

Both actions, a reversal of the President's recommendations, were regarded as tentative. The full Appropriations Committee must approve the sub-committee relief cut. The House CCC limitation came on a standing vote, subject to a later roll-call ballot.

Senate Debate on Dam.

Meanwhile, the economy issue was brought up in a heated Senate debate over initial appropriations for the $112,000,000 Gilbertsville, Ky., Dam. Opposing the project, Senator Millard Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland, warned that the Nation must save now to prepare for another depression.

"If we can't balance the budget now, in good times, what are we going to do when the next depression comes?" said Tydings.

Opposition to the Gilbertsville Dam lost in its first Senate test, when the chair overruled a point of order by Senator Bennett Champ Clark (Democrat), of Missouri. The controversy will be resumed today. The Senate recessed overnight without reaching a vote on the project.

The 89 Republican members of the House at a conference late last night adopted a resolution advocating that Federal grants in aid be given to the States for works relief rather than continuing the present system of Federal Administration. They did not go on record as to a definite amount to be appropriated by the Federal Government. Under the Republican plan, States and local authorities would contribute at least 25 per cent of the total relief bill.

Committee Vote Tomorrow.

The House sub-committee vote for a half-billion-dollar slash in the President's relief estimates came in the face of reputed White House insistence on the full amount, and leadership forecasts of a $1,500,000,000 appropriation.

The action is subject to another vote by the full Appropriations Committee, probably tomorrow, when there is a possibility the $500,000,000 may be restored. Representative Pat Boland, of Pennsylvania, House Democratic whip, predicted the House ultimately will vote the full $1,500,000,000, regardless of what the full committee does.

Motion for the cut was made by Representative Clifton A. Woodrum (Democrat), of Virginia, chairman of the sub-committee. He is said to have been supported by only one other Democrat, Representative Thomas S. McMillan, of South Carolina. The two Democrats were reported to have voted with three Republicans for the curtailment, with four Democrats voting against it.

Under G. O. P. Figure.

The sub-committee vote not only cut under the President's relief estimates, but slashed below the figure fixed in a Republican relief program jointly sponsored by Representative Robert L. Bacon, of New York, and Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg, of Michigan.

The Vandenberg-Bacon plan would return relief administration to the States, but would appropriate $1,250,000,000. This would be matched 25 cents on the dollar by the States. States would receive allocations on the basis of size, ability to pay and need, but would determine the type of relief. A bipartisan National relief authority would be in charge of the fund.

Differences immediately developed among Republicans over the Vandenberg-Bacon plan. Representative John Taber, of New York, ranking

U. S. Experts Begin Study Of Revenues

By Franklyn Waltman.

Under the direction of Undersecretary Roswell Magill, the Treasury, it was learned yesterday, has commenced a sweeping study of the entire Federal tax structure for the purpose of recommending to the next session of Congress a general overhauling of revenue laws.

As a part of this study, Secreatry Magill and other Treasury officials today will start a four-day conference with 37 internal revenue agents in charge, representing all districts in the United States and Alaska. The purpose of this conference is to discuss means of expediting and improving efficiency of the field audit of income tax returns.

Another step in furtherance of the new survey of the Federal structure was the appointment yesterday by Chirman Eugene Black, of the Board of Tax Appeals, of three members of that agency to serve with three members of the staff of the chief counsel of the Internal Revenue Bureau to formulate recommendations for expediting the disposition of tax cases before the board.

Comprehensive Study.

This study of the Federal tax structure is expected to be the most comprehensive undertaken in many years. Out of it may come recommendations for virtual rewriting of Federal revenue legislation in the interest of greater efficiency, simplicity of administration and claity for taxpayers. The possibility also exists that the Treasury may propose both the inauguration of new taxes, as well as increased rates in existing taxes and the repeal of some existing levies, such as the "nuisance" taxes and the capital gains and losses tax.

The present Federal tax structure has developed in a haphazard manner, especially during the last seven years, when the Treasury was painfully concerned with the necessity of obtaining new revenue and without having time to refine and perfect its proposals.

Instead of undertaking piecemeal amendment to close loopholes and eliminate kinks in the existing system, the Treasury has decided on a complete survey and overhauling of the Federal tax structure in order to make it more equitable, stable and productive of revenue. It is the Administration's desire that only extension for one year of existing "nuisance taxes" be undertaken at this session of Congress.

Attention on Capital Tax.

Especial attention will be given by Secretary Magill and his aides and consultants to whether the Capital gains and losses tax should be entirely repealed, or whether the provisions of that levy should be revised to make them more workable and equitable. In this connection the effect of the tax on security price movements is regarded as important as its revenue aspects.

Among other subjects under inquiry were the recently-enacted tax

Republican Sweeps Pennsylvania Vote

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Huntingdon, Pa., May 11.—Richard M. Simpson, Republican, won a smashing victory in the Eighteenth District congressional election today, carrying seven out of eight counties over his Democratic opponent Lowell H. Alexander, of Belleville. Alexander telephoned his congratulations to Simpson at 8:25 p. m.

At that time, Simpson was leading by a 9,000 majority with three small counties still to be completed. Simpson carried almost 70 per cent of the popular vote against 52 per cent in the Republican victory last November.

Simpson campaigned solely on the Supreme Court issue, declaring success of Roosevelt plan would "undermine the very foundations of constitutional government."

German Planes Bomb Bilbao Eleven Times

Refugees Pour Into City; Madrid Troops Move Nearer Toledo.

By the Associated Press.

Bilbao, Spain, May 11.—Insurgent air raiders bombed Bilbao 11 times today, apparently in warning of what may come tomorrow if the Basque capital does not comply with demands for surrender.

Gen. Emilio Mola reported late tonight the central columns of his army driving toward Bilbao had taken the Bizcargi range of mountains by assault and reached positions less than 6 miles from the beleaguered Basque capital.

Manifestos dropped previously from insurgent planes had declared Gen. Mola's besieging force would "bomb the city by land, sea and air without mercy unless Bilbao surrenders by Wednesday."

Bilbao's civilians, numbering more than 300,000, raced for shelter with each successive appearance of the German-made bombing craft. The planes made their first raid at 6:30 a. m. and their eleventh at 11 a. m., concentrating largely on the outskirts of the city.

Authorities gave no indication they would give an inch in the face of Mola's demand for surrender, although tearful refugees from the surrounding country continued to pour into the besieged city, hoping to be exacuated to safety abroad.

Only 7,400 noncombatants had

Committee Favor Is Forecast For 4 of 6 District Tax Plans

Sales Levy Hinted After Validity of Income Revenue Meets With Doubt; City May Lose U. S. Money by Barring Gas Fund Diversion.

Approval of at least four of the six local tax proposals by the House sub-committee on District revenue was forecast yesterday by Chairman Kennedy after validity of an income tax for Washington had been challenged and a sales tax suggested.

Following an executive session of the sub-committee and District officials, Kennedy said that the members are in general agreement on the insurance tax, the inheritance levy, the motor vehicle weight tax and the principle of a business privilege assessment.

The sub-committee is divided, he stated, on the 1-cent gasoline tax increase and the income levy.

The members also differ on whether the motor vehicle weight tax revenue should go into the general fund or be applied solely to expenses incidental to highway maintenance and traffic control.

While the Kennedy sub-committee was engaged in discussion of this problem the House Roads Committee voted to table a bill to extend Federal highway aid to the District on the same basis as the States.

It is understood that the action was precipitated by the uncertainty as to whether the District Committee would recommend a diversion of gasoline tax revenue to other than highway costs.

Unless the bill, which has passed the Senate, is subsequently revived by the committee, the District will be deprived of approximately $600,-

Jordon to Win Fight for Life, Is Belief Here

Victory on New Evidence, or Presidential Action, Is Expected.

By Edward T. Folliard.

Thomas Jordon, 31, sentenced to die for the killing of Mrs. Lizzie Jaynes in the Garden T Shoppe murder case, will never go to the electric chair, in the opinion of usually well-posted courthouse circles.

It was predicted yesterday that important new evidence now in the hands of the Department of Justice will bring one of two results:

1. A new trial, with the probability of an acquittal or a less harsh sentence.

2. Some definite action by President Roosevelt to save Jordon from the chair.

The little, mustached short order cook was sentenced to die in the District Jail day after tomorrow. Last Friday, as Jordon was contemplating one remaining week of life, President Roosevelt, from his boat in the Gulf of Mexico, wirelessed the Department of Justice ordering a 30-day postponement.

Previously the President had denied a plea for clemency. That he finally postponed the execution was due to the uncovering of new evidence. In all likelihood, he will order another stay if it is necessary.

Whatever happens, it is expected that the local police and prosecuting authorities are going to have to answer a number of questions in connection with the Jordon case, some of them embarrassing.

Department of Justice agents have lined up several persons with an intimate knowledge of the Garden T Shoppe murder who were

Republicans Stage Street Clashes With Police Over Coronation.

By the United Press.

Dublin, Irish Free State, May 11.—Rioting and pistol shooting swept Dublin streets tonight when the "old Irish republican army" demonstrated in protest against tomorrow's coronation of King George VI as "King of Ireland."

Many demonstrators were taken to hospitals after Free State police charged with swinging clubs into republican ranks.

Shots were fired and shellalahs cracked heads as the police, acting under orders from Defense Minister Patrick Routledge, attempted to prevent the republicans from holding a parade.

The anti-imperialists sought to "repudiate the coronation of the English King as the King of Ireland."

The parade was to have passed through the center of the city, and thousands had assembled for the demonstration of Free State independence when police charged the throng.

Meanwhile, small Union Jacks, coronation souvenirs and King George VI mementos sold freely in the streets, although several vendors were attacked and mauled.

The entire central portion of Dublin seethed with excitement when the rioting broke out shortly after

1,100 Red Cross Dinner Guests Hear Miss Boardman Praised

Crowding both the great and the small ballrooms of the Willard Hotel, more than 1,100 persons from every State in the Union last night attended a testimonial dinner honoring Miss Mabel T. Boardman, secretary of the American Red Cross.

Glowing tributes to Miss Boardman's 37 years of volunteer service were paid by R. Walton Moore, Assistant Secretary of State and a member of the central committee of the Red Cross, who spoke for the Nation; Vicomte Bonabes de Rouge, of Paris, representing 62 Red Cross societies of the world; Mrs. August Belmont of New York, and Miss Betty Ward. Admiral Cary T. Grayson, chairman of the Red Cross, acted as toastmaster. The invocation was by the Rev. Arthur A. O'Leary, president of Georgetown University.

Quoting President Taft's words spoken years ago that "we cannot think of the Red Cross without thinking of Miss Boardman, and we cannot think of Miss Boardman without thinking of the Red Cross," Moore went on to say:

"Throughout the present century she has continually labored to uphold the standards and enlarge the

Edward Gives Fiancee Ring On Eve of London's Ceremony

Monts, France, May 11 (A).—Edward of Windsor celebrated his formal engagement to Mrs. Wallis Warfield tonight on the eve of his brother's acceptance of the crown Edward renounced for love.

Mrs. Warfield, an emerald and platinum engagement ring glistening on her finger for the first time, sat beside the Duke of Windsor to listen to radio broadcasts of the coronation gayety in London.

Together they planned to stick close to the radio tomorrow in a 300-year-old hunting lodge, near the Chateau de Cande, and listen to the coronation ceremonies, living through a phase of the drama that for them is approaching a climax in their marriage.

Only the coronation tomorrow stands between Windsor and his marriage to Mrs. Warfield.

The newly betrothed couple will be alone except for their friends, Mr. and Mrs. Herman L. Rogers, in the hunting lodge before a log fire.

Only the coronation tomorrow stands between Windsor and his marriage to Mrs. Warfield, on whose hand he slipped his ring today. There was no sign that Edward regretted the decision which kept him

London, (Wednesday) May 12.—King George VI and his queen rode in a stately coach from Buckingham Palace at 10:30 o'clock today (4:30 a. m. E. S. T.) to Westminster Abbey to receive the crowns of king, emperor and queen of the world's most far-flung empire.

Sitting erect in the ornately-carved four-ton State Coach in which George III in 1761 rode to Parliament, the Monarch heard the vast voice of the Empire rise in a pouring sea of "Long Live the King" as the procession, replete with pageantry and overtoned with the solemnity of an empire's high hour, moved toward the towered front of Westminster Abbey.

England, by the consent of the people, is celebrating the hour of the crowning of a monarch and is trapping the hour with all the pageantry that English tradition has brought down from the times of the ill-fated Harold and King Canute and from the days beyond those misty times.

The world watched as King Albert Frederick Arthur George Windsor rode to his destiny. The faces of all peoples of the world packed the flag-draped streets—Oxford, Park Lane, the Mall, Piccadilly—while the procession, miles long, moved the tall, serious-faced Briton toward the coronation.

Within three hours, he was to emerge from the crowded abbey as George VI, "by the grace of God, of Great Britain, Ireland and of British dominions beyond the seas, King, Defender of the Faith, Emperor of India." The dark-haired Scottish woman who is his wife was to be crowned at the same hour.

Crowds Remember Edward.

Meanwhile, at this hour, the tall Briton's brother Edward was with his bride-to-be in France. The crowds here are remembering this, guardedly.

The streets through which the procession moved are a wild riot of the Empire's colors. The crowds are roaring an unrestrained acclaim. The streets are so densely packed that the "bobbies" are like small boys holding their fingers against innumerable holes in a dike. There are Canadian faces crowded against the faces of men from India and men from Australia, and the elbows of men from America rub those of the peoples of all the world. Strange tongues rise in acclaim to a monarch-to-be and the tough, hickory temperament of the island's own people unbends in the cry of "Long Live the King."

The crowds that camped out all night for the glittering spectacle got their first thrill as early as 8:40 o'clock, when the first section of the long procession left Buckingham Palace.

This was made up of some lesser members of the royal family and some representatives of foreign powers.

Royal Family Follows.

This was followed at 9:50 o'clock by carriages bearing more important members of the royal family, including the Princess Royal, Princess Elizabeth; Princess Margaret Rose, the Duchess of Gloucester, the Duchess of Kent and Prince Arthur of Connaught.

At 10:10 o'clock, Dowager Queen Mary's procession started from Marlborough House, followed by that of King George and Queen Elizabeth, escorted by the household cavalry, colonial and dominion officers, yeomen of the guard, and other picturesque warriors.

The day broke with a threat of rain but the prospect of an imminent drizzle failed to halt the cascade of humanity flooding the coronation zone.

The big bells of the city including Big Ben, strike the quarter-hour and seem a chime for the coronation itself. The tall Briton appears very serious. The Queen smiles and bows. The roar sounds far ahead of their moving coach, grows louder as they near the abbey.

The King heard that roar when he and the Queen first emerged from Buckingham Palace. It moved upon him in

Capitol Hill Chuckles Over Dodd's Dictator

'Huey Long' Fear Grips Envoy, He Writes Carter Glass.

By Sidney Olson.

There was a good deal of lighthearted speculation on Capitol Hill yesterday over the identity of an unnamed billionaire who wants, according to Ambassador to Germany William E. Dodd, "a dictatorship," and who stands ready "to help a Huey Long."

The latest contribution from an Administration figure in support of the President's court reorganization bill came in a lengthy letter from Ambassador Dodd to Senators Robert J. Bulkley, of Ohio, and Carter Glass, of Virginia, both Democrats. No serious reaction was found in Congress to the epistle, and in some quarters doubt was expressed that there is a billionaire in this country.

In New York at the du Pont-Raskob tax hearing, according to the Associated Press, the attention of Pierre S. du Pont was called to the statement. He laughed and said:

"If any man had a billion, he wouldn't want to lose it that way. There are a lot of du Ponts, but all of them together wouldn't have a billion dollars."

Dodd's letter was dated March 1. However, both Bulkley and Glass had but vague remembrance of it, and the letter apparently had been ignored until the Richmond Times-Dispatch printed its text in full yesterday.

Bulkley, saying he had received the letter "some time ago," added that Dodd had written him from Berlin "because he mistakenly thought I was wavering in support of the President's court plan." Glass, in Lynchburg, Va., stated:

Just "Long Essay."

"I received a copy of a long essay from Ambassador Dodd two or three months ago; but it seemed to me to have no relevancy whatsoever to the question of packing the Supreme Court now before Congress.

"There is little new, as there is nothing of practical nature, in what Dr. Dodd wrote. It did not cause me to modify in the remotest way my radio address on the subject of packing the Supreme Court."

Dodd, a doctor of philosophy and former professor of history at the University of Chicago, and generally considered an authority on American history of the Civil War and prior years, struck throughout his letter at the belief "of those who seem to think the Supreme Court has a Constitutional right to overrule majority opinion."

Meanwhile, Senators Henrik Shipstead and Ernest Lundeen, both Farmer-Laborites of Minnesota, took positions on the court bill.

Shipstead Opposed.

Shipstead, recuperated from a long illness, directly asserted that he would "vote against the President's plan as it now stands, unless I see a more reasonable argument than I have seen so far." Lundeen, reminding reporters that he is the sponsor of a bill to fix the membership of the Supreme Court at 11, adding two more justices to the present body, said:

"I will not say that I may not vote for any variation of my bill, but I will first have to be convinced, after listening to the debate, that there is a need for any more justices before I so vote."

Dodd, in his letter, led up through a long series of examinations of past Supreme Court decisions, in which he endeavored to show that the will of the majority of the people has often been blocked by minorities in both the court and the Senate, to a discussion of dictatorship possibilities in the United States. He said:

Urge for Power.

"There are individuals of great wealth who wish a dictatorship and are ready to help a Huey Long. There are politicians, some in the Senate I've heard, who think they may come into power like that of the European dictators in Moscow, Berlin and Rome.

"One man, I've been told by personal friends, who owns nearly a billion dollars, is ready to support such a program and of course, control it."

It was "these dangers and their likely consequences," he said, which actuated him in writing the letter. He said his 40-year study of history made him believe that "all of us who believe in our system must do what we can to support our President, even if we wish to mend some of his reform measures."

He went on: "If the party which re-elected Roosevelt by an overwhelming majority last year decides to do as both parties have done in the past, we are in grave danger of losing our democratic system.

"If the party breaks up, the 80 per cent anti-Democratic press may do what the 80 per cent pro-slavery press did in the South between 1830 and 1860."

He made a direct attack on the integrity of Chief Justice John Marshall on the ground that Marshall had held that "the will of the people" should be defeated by minorities whenever "property rights" are endangered.

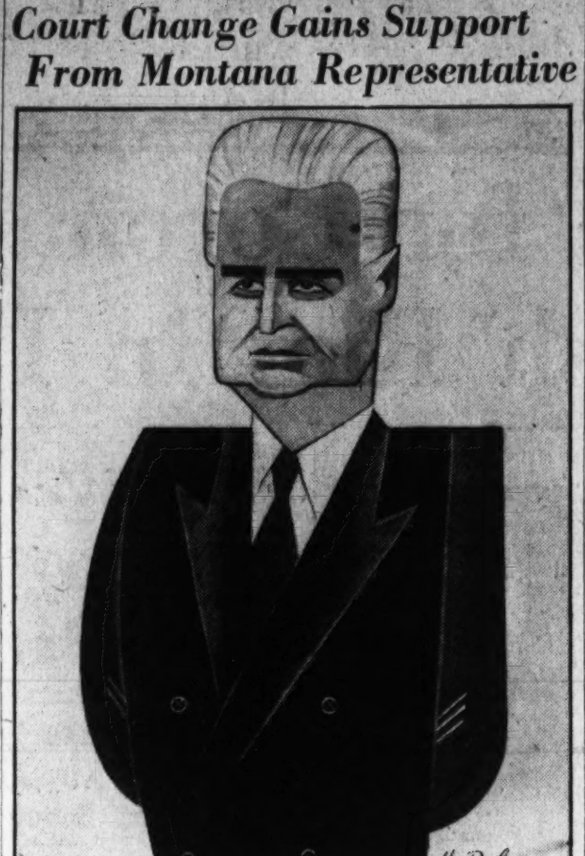
Tracing History.

"Jefferson was challenged in 1803 by John Marshall in the Marbury vs. Madison case. The new Chief Justice claimed the right to veto acts of Congress approved by the President. Jefferson, Madison and Gallatin, certainly able and informed men, declared the Constitution gave no such power; and practically every other living man who had participated in the convention of 1787, except Hamilton, was of the same opinion. Jefferson's second campaign, 1804, showed, in spite of all the violent opposition, such a result as Roosevelt's campaign of 1936.

"Judge Chase of the Supreme Court, having behaved shamefully on several occasions, decided as chief of the Federal District Court in Baltimore that Maryland's restoration of manhood suffrage was unconstitutional. The Maryland people were resentful."

New Faces in Congress.

Court Change Gains Support From Montana Representative



REPRESENTATIVE JAMES F. O'CONNOR.

Talk Court reform with James Francis O'Connor and he will tell you "Solomon justice depends upon how Solomon was raised."

Appropriately quoting Mark Twain, the silvery-haired Democratic Representative from Montana's second district declared the President is "not trying to pack but to unpack the Court," and he denounced the "economic predilections" of some justices.

"To many former corporation lawyers warm the Supreme Court bench," he remarked caustically. "There should be no juridical veto of matters dealing with the public welfare. That should be exclusively up to Congress."

Advocate of Peace.

Outspoken protagonist of the underdog, vehement foe of militarism, Representative O'Connor lashed out at the philosophy of preparedness and the war-time motto of "battleships instead of butter."

"I have and am opposed to any large appropriation for the Army and the Navy upon the theory of preparedness," he said. "Preparedness means you'll go out and look for trouble. There's no occasion for it."

The lawyer-bred Montanan favors a refinancing of farm mortgages by the Government (the interest not to exceed 3 per cent) and he holds the plight of the stricken farmers will continue until minimum prices have been fixed for all farm products.

Opposes Memorials.

Decrying the erection of public buildings or memorials, such as the proposed Jefferson Memorial, O'Connor went on record as a champion of irrigation and reclamation projects that will have the two-fold purpose of benefits and of revenue returns.

As for the Wagner act, he holds it is a step in the right direction. "It is an indication of what's coming," he added prophetically. "Labor is soon going to come into its own."

Thumbnail sketch: Born on a farm near California Junction, Iowa, May 7, 1878; attended public and normal schools in that State; graduated from the University of Nebraska Law School in 1904 with L.L.B. degree; profession, lawyer, stockman, rancher; has had considerable experience also in the banking business.

Once on Bench.

He served as district judge of the sixth judicial district of Montana in 1912; was member of the State House of Representatives, 1917-18, serving as speaker during the same term; in 1918 became special counsel for the Federal Trade Commission here in Washington and prosecuted cases involving the Clayton amendment to the anti-trust law; elected to the Seventy-fifth Congress by a vote of almost 2 to 1.

Hobbies: Owns a cow ranch where he raises cattle and loves to ride horseback. Right now all his leisure thoughts are centered on the Livingston Round-Up Association's jamboree to be held at the mouth of Yellowstone Park, July 2, 3 and 4. He promises some real "cut-upping" and cowboy stuff. Troops and a band from Fort Warren, Wyo., will be present.

Affidavit Attacks Senator Berry on Morality Grounds

By the Associated Press.

A petition charging Senator George L. Berry (Democrat), Tennessee, is not entitled to hold office because of "allegations concerning his moral turpitude" went into records of the Senate Privileges and Elections Committee yesterday.

H. Carlyle Lowry, who identified himself as an attorney from Maryville, Tenn., filed the document. He charged that Berry, President Roosevelt's Industrial Co-ordinator and head of Labor's Non-Partisan League, had been sued in Knoxville, and a judgment obtained against him.

"The suit," Lowry declared, "is said to have been brought for an accounting of funds due the pressmen's union, which were misappropriated by said George Berry."

Berry has been head of the International Pressmen's Union for 30 years.

Berry, sworn in as Senator Monday to succeed the late Nathan L. Bachman, declined to comment. His friends described the charges as "groundless and political."

Senator George (Democrat), Georgia, chairman of the elections committee of which Berry is now a member, agreed to consider the charges, and said they probably would be taken up within the next few days.

Lowry told reporters he was assembling more evidence to back up his charge.

Hoover Receives Institute's Award

New York, May 11 (AP).—The National Institute of Social Sciences tonight presented its gold medal for "distinguished services rendered to humanity" to:

Dr. James Rowland Angell, retiring president of Yale University; J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation; Mrs. Mary Louise Curtis Bok, founder and president of the Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia, and Dr. Wesley Clair Mitchell, Columbia University professor and research director for the National Bureau of Economic Research.

Hoover was cited particularly as one "who has been instrumental in establishing a complete change of the psychology of the boys of the country by having 'dramatized' the 'G' men instead of the criminal, thereby reducing in a marked degree, crime in this country."

Texas Acclaims Roosevelt With 21-Gun Salute

President, on Way Home, Due Here Friday Morning.

By the Associated Press.

Fort Worth, Tex., May 11.—President Roosevelt traveled across the rolling hills of central Texas today to this city, which he reached at 9 o'clock tonight. He left at once by motor for the home of his son, Elliott, to spend the night.

He told crowds along the way in Texas that he had enjoyed a "wonderful" fishing vacation in the Lone Star State's "hospitable waters."

He planned to leave tomorrow evening for Washington. He will arfive there Friday morning, traveling by way of St. Louis and Indianapolis.

The President traveled from Galveston this morning to Houston and from there to College Station, where he reviewed five regiments of Texas A. and M. cadets.

He told all his audiences he was glad to be back in Texas and had really had a great time snagging tarpon off Port Aransas.

"The fish have been as good to me as the people of Texas," he told a laughing crowd on the beach drive at Galveston, where he landed from the yacht Potomac at 9:10 a. m.

He drew an outburst from the crowd when he told of a 24-pound amberjack caught yesterday by his military aide, Col. Edwin M. Watson, "now weighing 35 pounds," and of being glad to "get down here on the ocean" after spending a "hectic week" in sunny Houston in 1928 at the Dmocratic national convention.

As the Chief Executive stepped ashore at Galveston a battery from Fort Crockett fired a 21-gun salute. He then was taken on a motor tour through the island city, whose holiday crowds shouted greetings from the oleander-bordered streets.

Mayor Levy referred to the President as the "Pericles of the West," whose regime would go down in history as the "golden age of democracy."

Levy presented the President, the first White House incumbent to visit Galveston since 1891, with a rod and reel. The President told the crowd he was coming back to give the rod a chance to "prove itself." He landed 2 tarpon out of 16 caught by the party during 11 days of fishing.

At Houston, where the train stopped for ten minutes, the President spoke again of having enjoyed his cruise, and expressed the hope he could come back some time with Mrs. Roosevelt.

At College Station the President told a throng of about 15,000 persons in Texas A. and M. College Stadium American expenditures for the Army and Navy and military training were for "defense and not aggression," and he hoped other nations would follow our example in the interest of peace.

Facing a colorful crowd after reviewing 3,000 of the school's reserve officer cadets, the President said the United States was spending about 10 or 11 per cent of its income for military purposes compared with 40 to 50 per cent by nations of the Old World.

Magistrate Frees Court Change Foes

Philadelphia, May 11 (AP).—Charges that Owen Wister, the author, and two officials of the Defenders, Inc., violated the State solicitations act in preparations for a mass meeting agianst the President's proposed Supreme Court changes, were dismissed today by Magistrate Atkinson Costello.

Joseph N. Corcoran, special deputy attorney general, explained to the magistrate that the arrests had been made without the consent of Attorney General Charles J. Margiotti, and that Margiotti had directed that the prosecution be withdrawn.

"It's a pleasure to dismiss you from the custody of this court," said the magistrate.

Wister, honorary chairman of the Pennsylvania unit of the organization which sponsored the meeting last night in which four Democratic United States Senators spoke against the court proposal, smilingly remarked:

"We won't be able to fight after all."

John B. Carrigan, vice president of the Defenders, and Louis M. Bailey, both of New York, were arrested yesterday a few hours before meeting in the academy of music, and charged with soliciting funds without obtaining a State permit.

British Colony in Italy Avoids Newspaper Ban

Rome, May 11 (AP).—Protestant members of the British colony here suddenly acquired interest in the Catholic Press today as Italy's boycott of British news banished the London date line from all papers in Rome except the Vatican organ, Osservatore Romano.

With Italian correspondents recalled from London and all but three British papers banned in Italy, the Osservatore obligingly printed a long account of coronation preparations.

Zeppelin Dead Get Nazi Salute At Pier in N. Y.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 11.—Arms raised toward the sunset in Nazi salute, thousands of persons filed past 28 coffins tonight in the final American tribute to Germans who died in the Hindenburg inferno.

In the throng at the Hudson River pier of the Hamburg American Line, preparatory to sending home by water those who were to have gone by air, were about 20 survivors of the catastrophe, some of them still swathed in bandages.

The flag-draped coffins of their comrades lay in single file along the pier, and for two hours before the funeral ceremony the procession filed by, German societies and 500 members of the crew of the liner Hamburg.

Stand at Attention.

From Capt. Bauer, in German:

"Life has gone from our comrades, but their spirit gives us strength to go farther for Germany in aeronautics."

Dr. Hans Luther, retiring German Ambassador to Washington, and Commander Charles E. Rosendahl, American airship hero and commandant of the Lakehurst Naval Air Station, where the Hindenburg plunged to earth in flames Thursday, delivered the principal eulogies.

American and Swedish as well as German flags lined the dock, and directly in front of the speakers' platform was the coffin of Birger Brink, Swedish newspaper correspondent, who died in the fire. His coffin, draped in his country's flag, was on the left of that of Capt. Ernst Lehmann, advisory commander of the Hindenburg.

Flowers Heaped High.

Lehmann's coffin, piled higher than any others with lilies, was covered with the German swastika emblem, as were all others but one. This was draped in an American flag and bore the body of Moritz Feibusch, German-American passenger victim, which will be sent to San Francisco.

A brown-shirted storm trooper from the liner Hamburg stood at attention behind each coffin as the ship's band opened the memorial services with hymns. Catholic and Protestant clergymen delivered brief sermons.

Mayor LaGuardia sent Deputy Police Commissioner Harold Fowler and six police officers as his representatives.

It appeared as though nearly the entire crowd on the dock joined in singing the "Horst Wessel," the Nazi song, after they responded to Dr. Luther's speech with "Deutschland Uber Alles." And nearly all repeatedly joined in the Nazi salutes, even when they sang the American and Swedish national anthems.

To Hear Witnesses.

Lakehurst, N. J., May 11.—From the aghast audience that watched the flaming Hindenburg plummet to destruction the Department of Commerce investigation board decided today to seek the next accounts of the mysterious disaster which cost 35 lives.

At a private conference the three-man board agreed to defer its canvass of expert opinion on the disaster's probable cause and the examination of crew survivors until after the ground eyewitnesses have told their stories.

In preparation for resumption of the public hearings tomorrow, the investigators made a careful inspection of the decommissioned Navy dirigible Los Angeles, now berthed in the great hangar.

Examine Los Angeles.

The Los Angeles, built in Germany, is very similar to the Hindenburg in construction, although somewhat smaller, Navy officers said. The inspection was to give the investigators the opportunity of familiarizing themselves with the interior of a large dirigible.

'Coerced' Into Annulment Suit, Nan Brill, Crying, Tells Court

Mrs. Nan Pierson Brooks Macy Brill abruptly ended annulment proceedings filed against her husband in Los Angeles yesterday when she sobbed from the stand that she loved Brill and didn't want any annulment after all.

Hearing Postponed for Week as She Sobs of Her Love for Husband and Asserts, 'It's All His Family's Fault.'

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, May 11.—Mrs. Nan Pierson Brooks Macy Brill, pretty New York society girl, came to court today to get an annulment of her marriage to William Hunsaker Brill and then give the court a surprise.

Suddenly she broke into tears, saying she had been coerced into applying for the annulment, didn't want it, and wouldn't have it.

Her attorney, Russell Garner, blinked. Superior Judge Leslie E. Still gaped. Daniel Hunsaker, attorney and uncle of her husband, jumped to his feet and began to sputter.

Mrs. Brill had taken the witness stand. She answered one question, regarding her name. Then she turned to the judge and cried:

"But, your honor, I don't want this annulment. Bill Brill loves me and I love him, and there is no reason for this annulment."

Garner, recovering from the shock, said:

"I'm surprised, your honor," he said, "she come to my office and signed this complaint——."

"It's all his family's fault," the witness sobbed. "Bill is in love with me and he was cold sober when he married me. I'm not going to have this marriage annulled by fraud."

The judge, interrupting, said "It appears that both of these young people are of legal age. I see no reason why an annudment should be granted if you don't want one."

He continued the hearing for one week, and advised Mrs. Brill to get a new attorney.

Navy Dentist Lost When Plane Falls Near Canal Zone

Lieut. (Junior Grade) Joseph W. Campbell, United States Navy Dental Corps, formerly stationed at the Navy Yard here, was missing and believed drowned yesterday after a Navy patrol plane, in which he was a passenger, crashed at sea about 135 miles northeast of Coco Solo, Canal Zone.

According to Navy dispatches, the plane crashed into a submerged log while making a forced landing in the ocean. The pilot and four others, whose names were not given, were rescued by another plane. The plane was flying mail to the Navy's patrol vessel, Nokomis, which is making a survey off the coast of Colombia. The Nokomis, two other Navy vessels and two planes made a search.

The survivors were: Lieut. Cameron Briggs, the pilot, who suffered acid burns; Cadet J. P. Sager, A. L. Odum and R. M. Manders, aviation machinists' mates, and T. P. Stafford, radioman. All suffered minor cuts and bruises.

Campbell, a native of Pennsylvania, was stationed here two years ago, being dispatched last year for duty with the Fleet Air Base at Coco Solo. He was appointed to the Navy Dental Corps in 1932. He was 32. The only survivor is a sister, Mrs. Anna Bond, of Pittsburgh, Pa.

Trial Board Asks Officer's Dismissal

A Police Trial Board yesterday recommended the dismissal of Policeman Frank C. Seeley, of the Ninth Precinct, when he was found guilty of four charges, including intoxication.

Under the supervision of Inspector William G. Stott, the board acted on charges of intoxication, conduct unbecoming an officer, leaving his beat while on duty and failing to communicate with his precinct station.

Maj. Ernest W. Brown, police chief, who announced the board's findings, said the recommendation will be forwarded to the Commissioners. Seeley was appointed to the force in 1935.

Bill in Tennessee Asks Minimum Bacon Slice

Nashville, Tenn., May 11 (AP).—Bacon slices in Tennessee could be no shorter than 1⅞ inches or less than 1-132 of an inch thick under provisions of a bill introduced in the Senate today.

"The ingenuity of men," the bill said, "has invented a machine that will slice bacon to such infinitesimal thinness as to make it invisible to the naked eye at a distance of 4 feet when lying on a white plate."

Ban on Abattoir Urged by Ickes To Senate Unit

King Bill Essential to Keep D. C. Desirable Capital, Secretary Asserts.

Desirability of the District of Columbia as the seat of government depends upon passage of the King bill to control and regulate "nuisance industries" here, Secretary Harold L. Ickes yesterday told a Senate sub-committee.

Testifying at the opening of hearings on the measure before a special unit of the Senate District Committee, the Interior Department head warned that the bill must be enacted as a safeguard against operation of the proposed Gobel abattoir at Benning road and Minnesota avenue northeast.

Besides Ickes, the sub-committee, headed by Senator Pat McCarran (Democrat), Nevada, heard Howard A. Gray, PWA housing director; C. Marshall Finnan, superintendent of National Capital Parks; John Nolan, jr., planning director of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission; Frederick H. Walton, abattoir expert of the Interior Department, and Lieut. Col. Dan I. Sultan, District Engineer Commissioner.

Resuming today at 2:30 p. m., the committee will hear Corporation Counsel Elwood Seal, who is expected to uphold the bill's constitutionality, and then call upon defenders of the plans of Adolf Gobel, Inc., of New York, to operate a slaughterhouse and rendering plant at the Benning road site.

Although full strength was marshaled yesterday against the abattoir and for passage of the King bill, McCarran intimated he lacked enthusiasm for the measure because it aparently is directed at a single company.

The Interior Secretary charged that the millions of dollars which have been spent by the Federal Government, the District, Maryland and Virginia for parks, parkways, housing and other developments "will to some extent be wasted" if "nuisance" industries are permitted to operate in the District.

The National Park Service alone controls parks and parkways appraised at $230,000,000 whose benefits are jeopardized by abattoirs and the like, Ickes said.

Park Commission's Work.

He reviewed the functions of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, whose duty is to plan the beautification and development of Washington, and said:

"To hamstring the commission in its endeavors and to impair substantially the value of the work which it has done by permitting great areas of the National Capital to be used for purposes inconsistent with any proper development of improvements . . . would be indeed a calamity."

Besides endangering the park system, the Gobel plant would nullify the work of the new $4,000,000 sewage disposal plant or else make its enlargement necessary, and affect the two proposed housing developments nearby, according to Ickes.

Ickes alone of the "pro" witnesses heard yesterday was not subjected to cross-examination, either by D. Edward Clarke, Gobel's local attorney, or William J. Neale, counsel for and president of the Union Stockyards Corporation.

Clarke drew from Col. Sultan an admission that the District issued a permit last year for construction of foundations without any objections being raised by the Commissioners.

Indorse King Bill.

Sultan said the Commissioners have indorsed the bill introduced by Chairman William H. King, of the Senate District Committee, with certain modifications.

One is that permits for continuance of existing "nuisance industries," under strict regulation, be granted for a period of three years instead of one. The Zoning Commision also would be given greater discretionary powers and would have the power to revoke permits for cause and after conducting hearings.

Facing Gray, who had just said location of an abattoir where model housing projects are planned "is little short of a social sin," Clarke demanded to know if Washington shouldn't have a local plant supplying fresh-killed meat.

"I think Washington is now amply supplied with shipped meat that is quite wholesome," replied Gray.

Nolen read a statement signed by Arno B. Cammerer, executive officer of the National Park and Planning Commission, citing the effect the abattoir would have on Fort Dupont and Anacostia Parks, Fort Drive and such proposed developments as the Municipal Stadium and the Washington-Baltimore boulevard.

Finnan made essentially the same points in his statement, and Clarke heatedly challenged the parks superintendent and Nolen to prove their objections were not based solely on "esthetic" grounds.

The Gobel plant would be 4,000 feet from Fort Dupont Park, 1,000 feet from a section of Fort Drive and within easy "smelling" distance of the Langston Terrace housing project (colored), Gallinger Hospital, Eastern High School, the Arboretum, Anacostia Park and the Capitol itself, according to testimoney presented yesterday.

Reviewing the history of the Bennings road site, Walton said it had been used for packing plant purposes off and on since October, 1906. The Gobel company first took an interest in the abattoir in 1930, but operations were discontinued when the Bureau of Animal Industry withdrew its permit February 28, 1933, he said.

Subsequently there was a fire on the premises. Present plans of Adolf Gobel, Inc., are to repair existing buildings and build an addition, installing modern equipment throughout.

Abattoir Site Since 1877.

V. D. Skipworth, of New York, president of the meat packing company, sat directly behind Chairman McCarran throughout yesterday's hearing but did not participate in examination of witnesses. He is expected to present his side of the controversy today.

Neale, who joined with Clarke in attempting to belittle the opposition's arguments, brought out the fact stockyards have been operated continuously since 1877 at and near the site of the proposed abattoir.

"Did you take this into consideration when you were planning your Alice in Wonderland project?" he chided, alluding to the two housing developments defended by Gray and Ickes.

The hearing room, crowded beyond capacity, resounded with laughter and applause when an embattled matron seated near the door took advantage of a momentary dull to rise and announce the Northeast section was dead set against erection and operation of the slaughterhouse.

She later identified herself as Mrs. Helen Fowler, "a resident of the Northeast for 50 years, gentlemen."

Police Patrol Movie Studios When Strike Violence Flares

By the Associated Press.

Hollywood, May 11.—Extra police patrolled strike-affected film studios today to guard against possible violence as leaders of the walkout discussed new campaign strategy.

While widespread picketing of movie theaters in Eastern and Midwestern cities was ordered, more than 250 officers were assigned to patrol the gates of Hollywood studios.

The precautions came as a result of several acts of violence yesterday. A studio employe was beaten, another attacked and two studio trucks damaged.

Charles Kimberlin, speaking for the striking Federation of Motion Picture Crafts, declined to comment upon the purpose of today's meeting of union officials.

"However," he declared, "we certainly will not consider the offer made by the producers last night."

The producers informed the ten striking unions of the federation they were ready to negotiate with them regarding wages, hours and "any other issue that may arise" if they would call off the strike and return to work immediately.

Kimberlin and Charles Lessing, business manager of the federation, insist on recognition of the federation as a bargaining agency for studio employes.

Lessing said the disorders yesterday were not caused by strikers. He added that within ten days he hoped about 2,000,000 pickets will be active before the lobbies of theaters over the Nation.

As a result of the producers' capitulation to the demands of the Screen Actors Guild Sunday, actors and actresses, including Greta Garbo, Marlene Dietrich and Lionel Barrymore, hurriedly joined the guild.

Strike Closes G. M. Plant.

Saginaw, Mich., May 11 (AP).—General Motors officials closed the Chevrolet foundry, employing 5,500 men, here today after about 250 workers in the cleaning and core rooms struck demanding new wage and hour agreements.

About 1,500 employes formed a picket line around the plant. The demands were not announced immediately.

Broadway Theaters Picketed.

New York, May 11 (AP).—Pickets began to parade in front of moving picture houses on the Great White Way tonight in response to the appeal of Hollywood studio strikers for demonstrations in favor of a boycott.

From headquarters in the garment section, 300 members of the Brotherhood of Painters and Decorators, an affiliate of the American Federation of Labor, paraded to the theater district and separated into units to picket individual theaters.

"Please do not patronize this theater. Help us win the Hollywood strike," the signs read.

Actor Dies at 80.

Bloomfield, N. J., May 11 (AP).—William Cattell, 80, veteran actor who sometimes played with Robert Mantell, died last night after a long illness.

Congress Aides Turn to C. I. O. In Union Aims

A. F. L. Leader Discourages Hopes of Secretaries for Admission.

The urge to unionize that has been felt of late by Congressional secretaries yesterday took a definite turn toward John L. Lewis' C. I. O.

Some 20 of the secretaries, meeting at a cafeteria on B street southeast, yesterday were discouraged in their attempt to affiliate with the American Federation of Government Employes when A. F. G. E. President Charles I. Stengle said that his organization's rulings did not contemplate the admission of "temporary employes." The A. F. G. E. is affiliated with the A. F. of L.

Hastening from the meeting to a dinner engagement with Representative Ramspeck (Democrat), of Georgia, the A. F. G. E. head missed the subsequent discussions in which the secretaries outspokenly said that if the A. F. G. E. was going to get finicky about who it accepted, then they would turn elsewhere.

They turned definitely toward the C. I. O. and appointed a committee to inquire into the possibilities of their acceptance by the Lewis organization. The committee consists of Robert Greenberg, secretary to Representative Henry George Teigan (Farmer-Labor), of Minnesota; John E. Kennedy, secretary to Representative Jerry J. O'Connell (Democrat), of Montana, and W. H. Courtney, secretary to Representative Don Gingery (Democrat), of Pennsylvania.

The committee will contact a representative of the C. I. O. and, it was said, will bring him to the next meeting of the group, to be held at noon next Tuesday in the same cafeteria.

The meeting was heralded by a mimeographed statement of aims, which held, in part:

"We believe there is a very general interest among a number of our group for civil service safeguards whereby we may continue our Government services in the event of 'not returning to the hill.'"

The secretaries yesterday said that they had been encouraged by an organizer for the A. F. G. E., and Col. Stengle said that his presence was due to clarify what seemed to be a mixed-up matter. He held them to be temporary employes, probably not eligible for A. F. G. E. admission as a group, but probably acceptable as individual members for the individual lodges. Then, too, Stengle entertained doubts about what his organization might be able to do for them since they were subject to the wills of the Congressmen, who, he pointed out, were their employers.

George, Elizabeth Leave Palace for Abbey as Dense Throngs Cheer

waves as he entered the coach and dinned and rattled and shook like a battle cry as he and the procession passed up the Mall, through Admiralty Arch—built by Sir Austin Webb in 1910 as part of the National Memorial to Queen Victoria—through Whitehall street—which flanks the United Kingdom Government offices, where in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries stood the Palace of Whitehall with its dim memories of Henry VIII and his ill-starred Anne Boleyn, and thence to the abbey, the most perfect medieval monument in Britain.

8,000 Gather in Abbey.

There he passed into what is the state ceremonial of England, possibly the oldest of the world today. He passed out of the reality of hard-stoned London streets, of hard-cried British acclaim, out of a world of moving vehicles and traffic jams and twentieth century sights and sounds into the medieval dimness of a hall where kings are crowned and the dreams of empire are laid.

In that cathedral dimness, 8,000 of the nobility, the clergy and the glittering representatives of all lands assembled to hear a ceremony which has been rehearsed until the principals are perfect. In this rehearsal a chosen few have heard the Archbishop of Canterbury present the tall, serious Briton as "Your Undoubted King."

"Are you willing?" they heard the archbishop ask.

In accordance with the traditional prescription, republished for use this year, "The people signify their willingness and joy by loud and repeated acclamations, all with one voice, crying out: 'God Save King George!'"

Rituals Rehearsed.

And these ceremonies, rituals that extend themselves in a colorful, weaving pattern over a two-hour period, have been rehearsed before a favored audience, and while the same thousands who cheered the incoming monarch today were jamming the outer streets for a glimpse of a history-making preparation.

On the authority of Sir Gerald Wollaston—garter principal king of arms: "The recognition by the people of the new sovereign, today a formality only, perpetuates a custom of earliest origin in our polity, for, although the succession of the crown has, in this country, been governed mainly by the principle of hereditary descent, there existed in the people a right to subject the individual successor to the discrimination of a national confirmation.

"This right was perhaps obscured by the incidents of the feudal system introduced by Willam the Conqueror although, even under that system, it was not entirely abrogated, and the assent of the people, as well as of the tenants in chief, was requisite to the complete inauguration of a new sovereign."

Then comes first the ceremony of recognition. The Archbishop of Canterbury, the lord chancellor, the lord great chamberlain, the lord high constable and the earl marshal, preceded by the garter king of arms, move to the east side of the theater. There the archbishop says to the hushed congregation:

"Sirs, I here present unto you King George, your undoubted King: wherefore all you who are come this day to do your homage and service, are you willing to do the same?"

King Faces People.

This proclamation is delivered to the south, west and north sides of the theater. The King stands by his chair and faces the people at whichever side the proclamation is delivered. To each demand the people acclaim:

"God save King George."

The sovereign's oath has varied in form, according to the religious and political state of the kingdom, Sir Gerald explains. But in substance, he points out, it has remained an obligation to maintain the laws and customs of the realm, to execute justice and mercy and to defend the church.

The taking of an oath and the ceremony of anointing and crowning have their roots of origin deep in a period antecedent to the Christian era, Sir Gerald avers. The books of the Old Testament evidence the performance of these rites at the inauguration of the ancient Jewish kings and, Sir Gerald follows, "it was doubtless on the authority of the Holy Scriptures that the same ceremonies were afterward adopted by the Christian nations. The ceremony of anointing may be considered the real pivot of the whole coronation, of which the crowning is the culmination, for the symbolism of the service emphasizes the sacred as well as the civil office to which the King is thus admitted."

Like Bishop's Consecration.

Indeed, it has been pointed out that the coronation service is practically identical with that used for the consecration of a bishop, except the laying on of hands, and some contend that there is evidence that even this rite was not omitted in earliest days.

The ceremony of anointing finds the King divested of his crimson robe and cap of state. The robe and cap are indicative of his parliamentary rank, and he comes in these to the abbey. He proceeds to the altar and is seated in King Edward's chair. A canopy is held over him by four Knights of the Garter, who are summoned up by the garter king of arms.

Then the Dean of Westminster takes from the altar the ampulla, which contains the consecrated oil. He pours some into the anointing spoon. This he hands to the archbishop, who anoints the king on the palms of his hands, his breast and his head in the form of a cross. This signifies glory, sanctity and fortitude.

Receives Robes, Regalia.

Anointed, the king receives the royal and priestly robes and the regalia is delivered to him. These robes have a high religious significance. Sir Gerald explains that they are the Colobium Sindonis, the Supertunica, the Armill or Stole and the Pallium or Royal Robe. "The Colobium Sindonis is a surplice without sleeves, with fine cambric, and was an ancient dress of bishops and priests. The Supertunica is a close-fitting surcoat with plain sleeves with rich cloth of gold. It has a girdle of the same material, with a gold buckle and hangers to suspend the sword with which the king is girded. The Armill or Stole is also of cloth of gold lined with crimson, and is placed round the neck. It is an ecclesiastical garment, the origin of which may be traced even prior to the Christian era and in this country (England) to Saxon times.

"A Stole dating from the beginning of the tenth century is preserved in Durham Cathedral and was recently exhibited at the British Museum."

The king finally is invested with the Pallium—a mantle in the form of a cope of purple with gold-braided tissues fastened at the neck with a broad gold clasp. The train reaches a foot on the ground. In the robes, and having received the spurs and the sword which indicate knighthood, and the Orb, the Scepters and the Ring, the king receives the final mark of his sovereignty, the Crown. This comes from the hand of the archbishop.

Queen Kneels at Altar.

The Queen has remained at her royal chair at the right of the altar where she was seated after entering with the King. Now she proceeds to the front of the altar and kneels. Two bishops escort her there. The King watches from his throne. She and the assemblage hear the archbishop pray that she may be a "great example of virtue nd piety." Then she moves to a footstool between King Edward's Chair and the altar and kneels again. Four peeresses shelter her with a cloth of gorld. She is annointed with the holy oil on the crown of her head to "increase your honor and the grace of God's Holy Spirit." The Queen's ring is placed on her fourth finger, as "the seal of a sincere faith." She receives the crown as the King received it, but there is no acclamation.

Two bishops escort her to her throne and, en route, she bows reverently to the King.

Then, delivering their scepters to the lords, the King and Queen leave their thrones to worship in the chairs beside the altar. The King offers bread and wine and makes an offering of an altarcloth and an ingot of gold. The Queen places an altar cloth and an ingot upon the altar. The King and Queen receive the bread from the archbishop and the cup from the Dean of Westminster.

Crowns Are Put On.

The King and Queen then put on their crowns, take the scepters in their hands and "repair to their thrones." The archbishop goes to the Post Communion.

As the King descends from his throne to leave, the archbishop and all the audience recite the Our Father, say prayers in thanksgiving and sing an anthem. "The Peace of God Which Passeth All Understanding" is invoked by the Archbishop. From the choir comes the chant of "Te Deum Laudamus." The King descends from his throne.

The swordbearers precede him and the lords follow him into St. Edward's Chapel behind the altar. The Queen, in the meantime, goes out by the opposite side of the altar and, like the King, enters the chapel.

As they stand side by side in front of the chapel altar, the King gives up the scepter from his left hand. In return he is given the orb. He also exchanges his royal robe of state for a purple velvet gown.

At the last the King, in crown and with scepter and orb, and the Queen with crown and two scepters, enter again the body of the abbey and pass down the center. They pass out of the vast building. The coronation is ended.

The return procession from the abbey at 2:30 to 4 p. m. will be a 45-minute review of empire, a cavalcade of British royalty, foreign royalty, diplomats, Indian rulers, and British military units.

King to Broadcast.

For the first time in history a British King will broadcast to his subjects immediately following his coronation. Britons at home and Britons in the far corners of the earth will hear their newly crowned monarch deliver an address entitled "My Beloved People" at 8 p. m. (2 p. m. Washington time) through one of the greatest world radio hookups ever to be arranged. It will proceed from Buckingham Palace and will last for 15 minutes. Hundreds of stations will rebroadcast it, intercepting the powerful short waves from London.

Coronation day opened officially at 1 a. m. when bugles, sounding above the din in the streets that has turned staid London into a carnival midway, sent 30,000 troops to their posts along the coronation route.

It was London's wildest scene since the armistice.

As coronation day began, London was steeped in fog, the deafening clamor of crowds and a consequent congestion. There was revelry in the streets, continuing through the night.

Fog on the outskirts of London early today seriously impeded the traffic pouring in from all directions. Automobile travel was slowed to a walking pace in the nearby counties of Essex, Hertfordshire, Middlesex and Buckinghamshire.

And in the sequestered depths of Buckingham Palace, the King and Queen sought sleep in preparation for their day of dedication.

Outside, traffic policemen began closing off the route of the coronation procession. They hoped to bring order to the greatest traffic jam of the city's history. All about them, people jammed and crushed in the six-mile route. The din made sleep difficult anywhere in the city.

Spectators Bring Periscopes.

The crowds, here from all parts of the world, were undaunted by forecasts of scattered rain. They milled about, holding periscopes, lunch kits, guitars, accordions, flasks and mattresses. Those with the accordions played them—those with the flasks used them—the city swung to the tunes of the gay, itinerant musicians.

The crowds swarmed over Piccadilly Circus and Hyde Park. Police searched the still empty stands—with reserved seats—along the Mall with an eye for stowaways. The roaring was so great from the vast throng that it may have penetrated the palace where the King and Queen were seeking repose. The cries of "God save the King" were almost constant.

Parents elbowed through the throngs, carrying children in their arms.

Down in the recesses of Westminster Abbey, Scotland Yard men were ferreting for cranks or gate-crashers.

Bus Strike Continues.

The strike of busmen was continuing. Fears other transport systems would be halted were allayed when leaders of the street car and trolley-bus workers' unions refused to join the walkout.

Famed Hyde Park appears as a vast camping ground. Thousands of persons have thrown up tents. Some say the women there outnumber the men. The crowd's chief concern seems to be the finding of advantageous places from which to view the parade spectacle which follows the coronation. Many have held to places through long wearisome hours.

In a final preface to the ceremonial, a stately procession passed through the streets to Westminster Abbey late yesterday. In a state coach rested the $30,000,000 in crown regalia and jewels. Mounted Life Guards, helmeted and plumed, flanked the coach in a protecting van.

Gems Guarded at Abbey.

The glittering gems were placed in the Jerusalem Chamber of the abbey. A night-long vigil was maintained by Yeomen of the Guard.

Symbolizing the link between church and crown, the vast, towering abbey was quiet and undisturbed in the seething mass that is London. Pale light was on the blue carpets, the gold and blue brocades, the gold curtains, the kingly setting in which a King will receive a crown.

Outside, the city seethed.

The people thought, perhaps, of Edward VIII, in his seclusion now. The King invoked a theme of forgetfulness in replying to the loyal greetings from the Empire's prime ministers in the palace. Not once did he mention the brief and troubled reign of his brother, but rather dedicated himself to follow in the regal footsteps of his father, King George V.

Cites "Father's Work."

He said: "I stand on the threshold of a new life." His queen listened intently to his words. "Heavy are the responsibilities that have so suddenly and unexpectedly come upon me—but it gives me great courage to know I can count on your unfailing help and affection.

"For my part I shall do my utmost to carry on my father's work for the welfare of our great empire."

Human interest ran like a colorful cord through the twisted threads of the scene. A white-haired woman of 62 took her seat early yesterday afternoon on a sand bin near the abbey, withholding her name, but explaining her son had offered her a $30 seat but she chose a free one so she could keep the money. At 3 p. m. she was joined by two other elderly women, Misses Isabella and Dorothy Hunter, of New Castle-on-Tyne. They had witnessed the coronation of George V.

Shopkeepers, mindful of crowds, had barricaded windows. More people began swarming into Hyde Park. They, like the others, had camp stools and blankets. They said they had no mind for the weather. Many of them hummed the rollicking old English tunes. The scene was carefree, expectant.

Among the seething crowds were more than 50,000 Americans. Fifteen of these comprised the United States officials who will witness the abbey ceremonials.

Heading the American delegation was Ambassador Robert W. Bingham. While his brother, the King, rested, the Duke of Gloucester as senior prince of the royal family assumed the duties of entertainment.

Foreign envoys from more than 50 nations were received at a banquet given by the duke and duchess in St. James' Palace. The royal couple walked a by-path from their residence to avoid the crowds. Foreign members of royalty gathered in the Queen Anne drawing room, where the London Naval Conference was held.

Restaurants were swarmed, crowded out. Many paid $20 a plate for food; the wealthy paid much more. Into this swelling mass of celebrating people was poured the crowds from 200 excursion trains, arriving from all parts of Britain.

To care for emergencies were 60 surgeons, 500 ambulance officers, 5,000 non-commissioned officers, 165 nurses and 1,400 Sisters of the Church.

At 2 a. m., eight hours before the coronation's beginning at Buckingham Palace, automobiles, taxicabs, trucks and other vehicles traveled through the streets with sightseers. Private carrriers were overburdened because of the paralyzing strike of the busmen. The sightseers heard the crowds cheering on the street sides. "God save the King!" rose and swelled.

She Was Honored for Her Red Cross Work

work of the Red Cross, and here and abroad she is known as one of its most responsible and successful crusaders. Except for her wisdom and energy, the American Red Cross would lack a great deal of its present importance and efficiency. Except for her, it would not now be occupying the beautiful structure in Washington from which its activities radiate throughout our country and in other lands."

Reminding his audience that Miss Boardman has made "an outstanding contribution to the Red Cross as an international movement," Vicomte de Rouge, secretary general of the League of Red Cross Societies, said:

"It is for the inspiration which she has given throughout her long Red Cross career that we are, above all things, grateful to Miss Boardman. * * * Through those who draw their inspiration from her, the Red Cross, in these troubled times, is striving for peace and good-will. I am sure that in so doing—and Miss Boardman will certainly agree with me—the Red Cross is working not only to save the lives of human beings, but also to save the soul of humanity."

Highlights of the dinner featured the presentation of a remembrance gift to Miss Boardman from the Red Cross staff and a picturization of events in the history of the organization with which she was intimately connected.

At the head table with Admiral and Mrs. Grayson were Rear Admiral Perceval S. Rossiter, Senator and Mrs. William G. McAdoo, Mrs. William Howard Taft, Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, R. Walton Moore, Miss Margaret Moore, Maj. Gen. Charles R. Reynolds, George E. Scott, of Chicago; William Fortune, of Indianapolis; Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Knight, of San Francisco; Mrs. August Belmont, of New York; Mr. and Mrs. Gustavus Pope, of Detroit; Mrs. Henry P. Davison, of New York; Henry U. Sims, of Birmingham; Mr. and Mrs. James L. Fieser, Mr. and Mrs. James K. McClintock, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest J. Swift, Brig. Gen. and Mrs. F. R. Keefer, Vicomte de Rouge, the Rev. Arthur A. O'Leary, Gurney E. Newlin, of Los Angeles; Dr. Gregory L. Rabinovitch, Mrs. W. Murray Crane, George L. Harrison, of New York; Mr. and Mrs. Colin Herrle, Dr. Thomas E. Green, Mrs. Simon Wolf, Mr. and Mrs. Blackwell Newhall, Judge Pablo Berga, of Puerto Rico, Lammot duPont, jr., of Wilmington; Mrs. Henry L. Doherty, Mrs. Irene Sidley, Mrs. Charles G. King, and Mr. and Mrs. Paul H. Schmidt, of Evansville.

Earlier in the day, Wyoming was awarded the Red Cross membership honor flag as a reward for enrolling 9.78 per cent of its population in the organization last year.

H. T. Emmett, of Worland, Wyo., accepted the award from Admiral Grayson.

Radio Will Bring Coronation to U. S.

To millions of Americans who love pomp and ceremony and the glamour and glory of medieval monarchies as reflected in the British customs of today, a radio windfall arrives this morning. Even now, as you read, the ceremonies are on; but if the hour of 9 has not yet arrived you may hear the actual coronation of Britain's new King.

However, there are a number of juicy items planned for later in the day, notably "Homage to Empire" in which the new King receives the homage of all British peoples by means of short wave from all parts of the world. And then, at 2, King George VI makes his first address to the empire following the coronation. At 2:15 the celebration lightens and the British Broadcasting Corporation gives over to bright entertainment by famous stars of British radio, stage and cinema.

Lowell Thomas talks from London, by short wave, in his daily period at 5:45 (WMAL) and John Masefield, England's poet laureate, speaks on "Thoughts on the Beginning of a New Reign," at the same period, WRC.

If you miss the coronation this morning you have a rain check—because the morning program will be recorded by two of the major networks and made available to evening audiences: WMAL, 10:05 to midnight; WOL, 9:45 to 10:45.

Cinque Ports Barons Are Incensed at Taking 'Back Seats'

NoblesDemand Special Rights Or Better Seats

Postoffices Filled as New Issue Goes on Sale; Rulers Hosts at Luncheon.

By the Associated Press.

London, May 11.—The once-powerful barons of the Cinque Ports are angry because the places they have been assigned at the Westminster Abbey coronation service are behind the choir screen.

The barons of the ports of southern England once provided the King's navy, and for that work were permitted to carry a canopy over the King at coronation time. The canopy was abolished over 100 years ago at the crowning of William IV, but the barons were given the same places without having any tasks.

[The Cinque Ports are a number of towns, originally five, on the coast of Kent and Sussex—Dover, Sandwich, Romney, Hastings and Hythe. Later Winchelsea, Rye and other minor places wer added. The ports were enfranchosed by Edward the Confessor and received a charter of confirmation from Edward I in 1278.]

The Mayor of Margate, Alderman W. R. Noble, who seemed particularly annoyed by the seating plan at this coronation, told his colleagues:

"The barons of the Cinque Ports feel very incensed about it, and the matter will be raised at the next court of the Cinque Ports."

The barons hold that either the screen should be removed—which is virtually impossible, as it is part of the ancient abbey decorations—or the barons should be restored to their former front-rank places.

Long queues lined up in postoffices today to buy the new George VI postage stamps.

Officilas estimated 35,000,000 stamps were sold yesterday, the first day the issue was offered.

King George and Queen Elizabeth gave a luncheon party at Buckingham Palace today for the prime ministers of the dominions and other empire representatives here for the coronation.

Queen Mother Mary and the Duke and Duchess of Gloucester were among the 50 guests.

Many Soldiers Present.

Even Aladdin never rubbed from his lamp such fantasies of strange, exotic figures as stroll the streets on the eve of tomorrow's glittering pageant.

Bright-uniformed soldiers from the ends of the empire—lancers from India and maharajahs who reserve rooms by the floor instead of by suite—black men from the African colonies, shivering in khaki shorts, their curled goatees and red fezzes specked with rain and fog; native chieftains—particularly the one whose only costume is the vice admiral's uniform given him by King Edward VII more than a quarter century ago.

Australian troopers mounting guard outside Buckingham Palace, feathers in their wide felt hats pinned over one side . . . lanky New Zealanders . . . Scots in plaid and kilts, knobby knees exposed to stronger and chillier elements than their native "Scotch mists"—and to the stares of tittering maids . . . the scarlet blaze of Canadian Northwest "Mounties" . . . Arabs and Burmese . . . Royal Marines and smart-stiff-backed officers from the R. A. F.

Americans, jamming the famous Quaglino's Cafe Club, find a a bronze floor and Libby Holman, arrived in town with a single night's engagement to qualify as a coronation singer.

"King Anthony the First," the baldish soapbox orator who claims to be the rightful King of England through direct descent from King Henry VIII and Anne Boleyn, announces he is planning "something interesting" for coronation day. No details.

Peer Borrows for Robes.

London May 12 (U.P.).—The youngest peer—and one of the poorest—who will participate in the coronation will be Douglas Charles Lindsay Gordon, Marquis of Hintley and a $15-a-week automobile mechanic. He borrowed money for his coronation robes.

Loyal Londoners Mob Lone Backer Of Abdicated King

London (Wednesday), May 12 (AP). A one-man demonstration for the Duke of Windsor ended abruptly early today in Whitehall.

The demonstrator, a tall man dressed like a soldier on active service, shouted with a Welsh accent:

"Welsh nationalists do not forget. England rejoices while King Edward VIII lives in exile."

On his back was a Union Jack with a superimposed photograph of the former monarch; on his head was a steel helmet with the three-feathered emblem of the former Prince of Wales and his motto, "Ich Dien" ("I serve").

An angry cry rose from a gathering of young men who dashed at the stranger and tore off the flag and photograph. He fled down a side street, calling back in Welsh.

Oldest Visitor Is Parrot.

London, May 12 (U.P.).—The oldest coronation visitor is "Aunt Popsy," a parrot 113 years old brought to London by the Maharajah of Nawanagar. The bird was inherited by the Maharajah along with his title. "Aunt Popsy" stops talking only at the command, "goodnight."

Queen Mary to Wear Fortune In Diamonds at Coronation

No New Costume for Her, However; Royal Mother Selects Formal Dress She's Worn Before; Peeresses Use Rabbit Fur.

By the Associated Press.

London, May 11.—Queen Mother Mary, wearing a $500,000 diadem on her majestic head, will not wear a new dress when she sees her son crowned tomorrow in Westminster Abbey.

The Queen Mother nevetheless will be a regal figure at the abbey ceremonies, for she will wear her collection of diamonds estimated to be worth $2,000,000. Her diadem is part of her own 1911 coronation crown.

The dress she chose is embroidered with silver and diamente in a cascading design of roses and fuchsias. Its small sleeves of gold lace are edged with tiny rose leaves, and over the dress she will wear a purple velvet robe with a 5-foot train lined and edged with gold embroidery and ermine.

The revered Queen Mother, departing from precedent in seeing her son crowned, is taking no direct part in the ceremonies except the procession of the royal family through the abbey to the royal box. There, surrounded by her family and relatives, she will look down on a scene that undoubtedly will recall memories of her own coronation 26 years ago.

Then Queen Mother Alexandra, widow of Edward VII, did not see her son, George V, crowned, but attended private services at Sandringham with her sister, the Dowager Empress of Russia.

One of the Queen Mothers' friends, the Duchess of Hamilton, also is departing from precedent tomorrow. She will be the only duchess with rabbit fur on her peeress' robe instead of the traditional ermine.

The absence of ermine is a gesture, part of the duchess' ardent campaign against the trapping of fur-bearing animals. She will wear the robe she wore at the 1911 coronation when she acted as canopy-bearer for Queen Mary.

Since they are not allowed black-tailed ermine marking on their robes—reserved for royalty and the highest ranking peers and peeresses—many have decided to save about $500 on robes they may wear only once in a lifetime. They ordered their robes trimmed in rabbit instead of ermine.

Duke Gives Wallis Gem-Studded Engagement Ring on Eve of Coronation

Lower Classes Are Loyal, Yet Miss Windsor

Edward 'Better Out of It,' High Personage Says; Nation Curious.

By the Associated Press.

London, May 11.—The wheels of empire slowed, the flag-smothered capital dripped with rain and people resting for the coronation schedule had a last lingering chance today to think guardedly of the man who might have been crowned tomorrow and of the American-born woman he chose instead.

By next nightfall George VI will have been crowned. "By the Grace of God, of Great Britain, Ireland and of British Dominions beyond the Seas, King, Defender of the Faith, Emperor of India." So also will Elizabeth have been crowned as his queen.

Sitting in a tavern watching it rain as people have learned to do everywhere these London days, one Briton close to the people yet high in authority recited that title, stressed the significance of its religious phases and decided with a sigh that "Windsor is better out of it; he no longer fitted that frame."

Edward Unmentioned.

Not a single newspaper today, flooded by every detail of coronation, even mentioned the dramatic part played by the man who might have been crowned Edward VII tomorrow night but for his love for the woman from Baltimore, twice-divorced Wallis Warfield.

But people standing in the rain watching decorations wilt and inkstains run down the faces of pictures of their majesties, George and Elizabeth, people in high places and low still are thinking of and discussing the Duke who waits in France for the turmoil to subside before his own wedding.

Down in the lower sections of London, particularly where Windsor gave the poverty-stricken hope by a militant attitude in behalf of the Welsh miners, people shook their heads as they took in flags and dried them and pressed them fresh and waited until tomorrow before putting them up again, hoping the rain would cease.

Rites Too "Churchy."

"'E was such a nice man," said one fat, tollworn woman in Little Surrey street. 'But 'e got what 'e wanted, didn't 'e? Maybe we'd feel better with 'im. If only 'is woman 'adn't been divorced. We'd all 'ave come to love 'er. But it's all so churchy."

And back in the tavern, the man who knows what happened in high places put his finger squarely again on the point: "This coronation is really just a huge church service. The nation crowns him King and the church bestows its blessing and conducts the ceremony in its own words. Windsor didn't fit in there."

But none in the multitude who still love the man who was sold to them so completely as Prince of Wales, who caught their imaginations and tickled their fancies, would ever think of doing anything about it.

Britain has its royalty and its laws. They make a fetish of playing the game according to the book. Many believe Windsor played it and went on his way satisfied, and so his admirers must feel the same.

But everyone will grab the papers just the same after tomorrow's exhaustion to see how "the Prince" took it in France.

Nurses, Doctors Assigned.

London, May 12 (U.P.).—Thirty nurses and 20 doctors have been assigned to Westminister Abbey. Authorities fear that some aged peer may collapse under the weight of his 17-pound robe.

Paper Denies King Has People's Love

London (Wednesday), May 12 (AP). This sober note in the chorus of acclaim for the new King was embedded in a column-long editorial in today's News-Chronicle:

"The King to be crowned today is after all comparatively unknown to the people who will acclaim him. They may grow to love him, but they cannot, for the most part, greatly love him yet, as much as they may give him their respect and sympathy.

"What they will applaud rather is that for which he stands, that of which he is the symbol."

Couple Stroll In the Garden; Ignore London

from being the central figure in the Westminster Abbey ceremony.

The duke telephoned his best wishes to his brother, King George VI, and also spoke to his mother, Queen Mary, by telephone.

Paris dressmakers came during the day for another fitting of Mrs. Warfield's blue wedding gown, and she called Edward for a first glimpse of the dress.

The sight, it was understood, inspired the duke then and there to settle the engagement matter, which was to have been announced two days after his brother's coronation. He strode to his suite and returned with the platinum circlet he bought in an Austrian shop.

Once he had slipped the ring on Mrs. Warfield's finger, Rogers was authorized to announce the formal engagement.

While feverish crowds milled through London streets, the betrothed couple strolled through a blossoming orchard late in the afternoon, stopping now and then to feed tame deer and to listen to a Touraine nightingale.

They returned to the chateau for a late dinner, and Rogers said everyone would retire early so they could be up in time to hear all of the coronation broadcast.

The engagement announcement was in contrast to the duke's recent attempts to keep his name out of the headlines before the coronation.

English correspondents in Monts were advised today by their editors that the duke had asked to be kept out of newspapers as much as possible until after the Abbey ceremonies. Earlier in the day he had refused to pose for pictures.

Papers Preparing.

Paris, May 11 (AP).—The French government made it known tonight that it will permit no radio broadcast of the wedding of the Duke of Windsor and Mrs. Wallis Warfield—assuming it is held in France, as expected.

French authorities, however, will not impose any censorship on newspaper accounts of the duke's romance and marriage.

Over 50,000 Americans in London, But Less Than a Score Will See Ceremony

J. P. Morgan Is Reported as Among Guests of King George.

By the Associated Press.

London, May 11.—More than 50,000 Americans are in London tonight for the coronation—but less than a score of them will see the ceremonies in Westminster Abbey tomorrow.

Those who will look on while the new monarch is crowned are members of the United States Embassy staff and the special coronation delegation from the United States and the wives of five of them.

Besides these there will be Lady Astor, the former Nancy Langhorne, of Virginia, the first woman to take a seat in the British Parliament. She has held that place since 1919.

In addition, a usually reliable source said, J. P. Morgan, the financier, will be there as one of King George's distinguished guests. There was no official confirmation or denial of this.

The remainder of the 50,000 Americans will get their view of the coronation festivities from curbstone places they have guarded jealously for hours or from vantage points which have cost some of them as much as $250.

United States Ambassador Robert W. Bingham will lead the embassy delegation. With him in the richly dressed throng at the Abbey will be Mrs. Bingham; Ray Atherton, embassy counselor, and Mrs. Atherton; Col. Raymond Lee, military attache, and Mrs. Lee, and Capt. Russell Wilson, naval attache, and Mrs. Wilson.

James W. Gerard, leader of the special United States group and former Ambassador to Germany, will be accompanied by Mrs. Gerard; Gen. John J. Pershing, representing the United States Army; Rear Admiral Hugh Rodman, retired, representing the United States Navy; their aides, Col. James L. Collins and Commander Frank Beatty, and Curtis Bok, secretary of the group.

All the women will wear full court dress without train. In her coiffure each will have three white Prince of Wales plumes with a veil floating from the tip of the cluster.

Mrs. Bingham has chosen a Molyneux gown of white lace, embroidered with silver threads. Mrs. Lee will wear a white satin dress and a white brocade coat embroidered on the front in gold sequins.

Lady Astor, who will be seated in the bank of peeresses, is to be garbed in the regulation red velvet robe over a dress of old family lace, with a tiara and stomacher of diamonds.

Ambassador Bingham, Gerard and members of the diplomatic staff will attend the ceremony in full court dress, black knee breeches, evening dress coat of the same material, white waistcoat and white tie.

Coronation Time Table

London, May 11 (AP).—Here is the coronation day time table (British summer time given; subtract six hours for Washington time):

Dawn Prelude.

4 a. m.—First public conveyances arrive in center of London with early spectators.

5:30 a. m.—Four hundred gold staff officers, ushers at Westminster Abbey, breakfast in the royal gallery of the House of Lords.

6:30 a. m.—The peers and peeresses in velvet and ermine robes, carrying coronets, arrive at abbey, some by boat on River Thames.

Procession from Buckingham Palace to Westminster Abbey.

8:40 a. m.—Motor car procession starts from Buckingham Palace with some lesser members of the royal family and some representatives of foreign powers.

9:15 a. m.—A carriage procession of dominion prime ministers, empire representatives from India and Burma, and colonial rulers leaves palace for abbey.

9:50 a. m.—A carriage procession of members of the royal family, including the Princess Royal, Princess Elizabeth; Princess Margaret Rose, the Duchess of Gloucester, the Duchess of Kent and Prince Arthur, of Connaught, starts from the palace for abbey.

10:10 a. m.—Queen Mary's procession starts for the abbey from Marlborough House, her residence.

10:30 a. m.—The King and Queen leave Buckingham Palace for Westminster Abbey in the golden state coach, escorted by household cavalry, colonial and dominion officers, yeomen of the guard, the King's bargemaster and watermen, etc.

Abbey ceremonial.

11 a. m.—The King and Queen arrive at Westminster Abbey, are met by the Archbishop of Canterbury and escorted in procession up the nave and to their chairs of estate.

11:15 a. m.—Coronation service begins. The recognition. The archbishop presents the King to the people.

11:30 a. m.—The King takes the oath, to the church and to his people, standing bareheaded before the altar.

11:45 a. m.—Seated in the coronation chair, the King is anointed, covered by a pall of gold and silver brocade; he is attired in new vestments, is girded with the sword, touched with the spurs, receives the emblems of justice.

Noon—The King is crowned. Peers put on their coronets. Guns boom at the Tower of London and in St. James Park.

12:45 p. m.—The King goes to his throne, receives the homage of the bishops, the peers and the Duke of Gloucester.

1:30 p. m.—The Queen is anointed and crowned. The peeresses put on their coronets.

1:50—p. m.—The procession from the abbey back to Buckingham Palace starts.

The Return Procession.

2:40 p. m.—The coronation procession through the streets as the King and Queen return to Buckingham Palace. Military units join the procession which proceeds over a 6½-mile route, taking 40 minutes to pass any given point.

3:43 p. m.—The procession arrives back at Buckingham Palace.

Conclusion.

4:15 p. m.—The King and Queen descend to Buckingham Palace servants' quarters and are toasted by staff at a party.

4:30 p. m.—Their majesties begin a series of appearances on the balcony of Buckingham Palace.

8:00 p. m.—The King broadcasts to the empire.

9:00 p. m.—Night celebrations begin.

Judy Starr Divorced.

Clarksburg, W. Va., May 11 (AP).—Mrs. Shirley Louise Martin, known as Judy Starr on the stage and radio, was granted a divorce today from John Walton Martin, a glassworker.

American Woman, 68, Camping Out To See King Pass

London, May 11 (AP).—A 68-year-old American woman was one of the early birds in line for the long, chilly wait for a glimpse of the coronation procession tomorrow.

She was Miss Elizabeth Dunbar, of Philadelphia. Clutching a bundle of newspapers to keep her warm despite an overcoat, two sweaters, a muffler, spats and overshoes, Miss Dunbar encamped on a folding chair against a column on Piccadilly Circus to be sure not to miss the spectacle.

She had an ample supply of chocolate and nuts to fight off hunger during her night-long wait.

Washingtonians, at Cathedral Today, to Join British Church in Prayer and Thanksgiving for King and Queen

A service of prayer and thanksgiving on the occasion of the coronation of their Majesties King George VI and Queen Elizabeth will be held in the great choir of Washington Cathedral today at 10 a. m., with the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, D. D., LL. D., officiating.

The order of service has been adapted from that set forth by the Archbishop of Canterbury for use in churches throughout the British empire. Music will be furnished by the cathedral choir of men and boys under the direction of Robert G. Barrow.

The British Ambassador and his staff and the Ministers representing the dominions of the British empire will be present along with other representatives of the Diplomatic Corps.

Bishop Freeman has sent the following cablegram to the Archbishop of Canterbury:

"The bishop, dean and chapter of Washington Cathedral rejoice with the people of Great Britain in the coronation of their King and Queen. A notable service in Washington Cathedral on May 12 will join with the Church of England in earnest prayer that the richest of God's favor may be bestowed upon their Majesties and that a reign so auspiciously begun may mark the closer knitting of the ties that bind together our peoples, one in speech and Christian tradition. May I beg you to bear affectionate greetings and feliciations to their Majesties."

Hitler Sends King Congratulations

Berlin, May 11 (AP).—Reichsfuehrer Hitler sent King George VI of Great Britain a message of congratulation tonight on the eve of the coronation.

"May your majesty enjoy a long and happy reign, for the well-being of the British Empire and the preservation of world peace," Hitler said.

Brown Expanding Police School Plan

Expanding recent plans for establishing a school for detectives, Maj. Ernest W. Brown, chief of police, said yesterday he is contemplating the formation of a school for privates.

Tentative plans, the major said, call for the appearance of every police private in school for two-hour class at least once a week.

Lieut. Walter H. Thomas and Sergt. A. L. Lamb, who are in charge of the rookie cops, will be the instructors.

Maj. Brown said the men all are given extensive training when they join the force, "but become rusty after several years." The new school will teach self defense, scientific police methods as well as legal procedure.

A Tax On Enterprise.

Arthur A. Ballantine, former Undersecretary of the Treasury, has made a strong plea for repeal or revision of the capital gains tax. "Better treatment of the subject," he says, "would place Federal revenues on a sounder basis and would operate against the development of artificial and dangerous security markets and would tend toward the development of industry and an increase of employment."

The inequity of our system of taxation of capital gains has been frequently exposed. Failure to distinguish between current income and capital gains is unsound in principle. In practice, the injustice of a system which taxes gains that may have been accruing for many years as income of a single year is patent. That injustice is somewhat mitigated but not eliminated by reductions in the amount of the taxable gains in accordance with the length of time the property has been held. The inequity of the tax is further emphasized by the invidious treatment of capital losses, which are deductible only to the extent of capital gains plus an extra allowance of $2,000 in any single year.

Revenues from taxes of this sort are also highly unstable, rising in years of prosperity and shrinking rapidly in years of depression. More serious, however, from the long time viewpoint is the effect upon the taxpayer who is tempted to delay realizing his profits in boom times because of high taxes on his capital gains.

This disposition to delay "cashing in" on profits is strengthened by the provisions grading the levy with reference to the length of time the property has been held. As a result the tax discourages healthy liquidation and militates against the "free and normal security markets" which, in Mr. Ballantine's opinion, are more likely to prevail under the English system of ignoring capital gains and losses for income tax purposes.

The argument that taxation of capital gains retards investment has not been given the emphasis its importance deserves. Dr. B. M. Anderson recently discussed this aspect of the subject in a very instructive fashion. He pointed out that with our present high rates of income taxation, the tax on capital gains becomes in effect a tax on capital, forcing the dissipation of capital. For example, the man who realizes a profit by selling securities or real estate, receives capital funds turned over to him by the buyer. He in turn pays over part of this capital to the Government, which spends it for current running expenses. If the taxes are high, the result is, as Dr. Anderson says, a diversion of the community's capital to current expenditures and a check to the growth of social capital.

Apart from this serious defect, the tax on capital gains is also a deterrent to capital accumulation. The knowledge that heavy taxes will be imposed upon gains derived from sales of property curbs the spirit of enterprise and deters many people from embarking upon new undertakings. Thus, the more familiar arguments in favor of radical revision or repeal of the tax on capital gains are re-enforced by the knowledge that a reform of the system would stimulate investment activity and help provide jobs for idle workers.

Encouraging Sequel.

The Senate Civil Liberties Committee, in the fortnight before its recent adjournment, performed an invaluable service in exposing, with an abundance of detail, the chronic state of official lawlessness in Harlan County, Ky.

Yet such an investigation, no matter how thorough, is unlikely to serve any permanently constructive purpose unless the decent, law-abiding citizens of Harlan see to it that a thorough house-cleaning of their community takes place. Otherwise the good results of the Senate committee's probe are likely to be only temporary. Local improvement can be stimulated by Federal action. But the permanence of reform depends primarily on the strength of civilized instincts in the community itself.

So it is encouraging that, as a direct sequel to the Senate committee's hearings, action has been taken by the Harlan County authorities to bring to book certain of the culprits whose brutal activities were recently focused by the national spotlight. A charge of murder has been preferred against one deputy sheriff while he and two other deputies also face charges of shooting with intent to kill. These charges should be pressed to the full limit of the law.

This action, incidentally, is in sharp contrast to the earlier failure of the grand jury to return indictments in the shootings. The evidence brought out in Washington has, apparently, impressed the folks back home in Harlan. It is up to them to wipe out the blot on the reputation of a county which has become a by-word for vicious industrial relationships. Now the citizens of Harlan have, on their own initiative, begun to act. It is a hopeful sign.

The Coronation.

It is the whole long pageant of British history which is unrolled before the world in the symbolic action which takes place in London today.

Among the various ceremonies of the coronation service are some which antedate the Norman conquest, merging the far-flung empire of today with the distant, primitive period of Saxon England. The effect and, indeed, the purpose, is to blend the reigning monarch into the unbroken story of the nation to whose service he is consecrated. Outwardly undemocratic, the ceremony really typifies that willing subordination of the nominal ruler to the common purpose which is the apotheosis of democracy.

The British Empire is normally a highly practical and business-like concern, with little time and no great taste for those ornate displays which since the days of Rome have usually mingled pomp with power. But for the crowning of a new king a hard-headed government revives a ritual, half political, half religious, more complicated and traditionalized than any the modern world can show. Yet underneath it all lies the severe purpose of intelligent statecraft.

As the symbol of empire, as the one link which really holds together the scattered units of the British Commonwealth, the crown acquires an almost immeasureable dignity and importance. When it is placed on the head of the man designated to wear it, those ties of condominium are reaffirmed and the subordination of the King to the welfare of those for whom he reigns is emphasized.

Prior to the Act of Settlement, of 1701, by which Parliament established the popular right to decide who shall be king, the coronation had even greater political significance than is the case today. Up to that date the royal oath was regarded as a compact between the monarch and his people. Now the kingship is less important. The man can be quietly ousted, as the world has recently witnessed, if for any reason he fails to measure up to royal standards. But for just that reason the religious aspects of the ceremony have become more important. The man accepted as monarch by the British people, through their Parliament, must pledge himself, in the most solemn manner, to be their faithful and always honorable steward in his high office.

In this era of personal dictatorships there is inspiration for all friends of democracy in the dignified act of personal submission which is the essence of the coronation ceremonies. The scientific achievements of the twentieth century today enable the entire world to follow a traditional ceremony in parts over a thousand years old. With a similar flexibility British democracy has adapted the ancient institution of monarchy to the demands of the modern age.

It is this flexibility, this delicate harmonization of tradition with current needs, which is the outstanding triumph of the British political system. And in admiration of the skill which preserves that system while many another crashes into dust the entire world today joins the English people as they cry: "God Save King George!"

Blessing In Disguise.

The arrest in Philadelphia of two officers of The Defenders, an organization opposed to the President's court plan—and the issuance of a warrant for the distinguished novelist, Owen Wister, honorary chairman of the protest meeting held under its auspices, will require a great deal of explanation. The attorney general of Pennsylvania disclaims all responsibility for the arrests, asserting that they were "outrageous." So it is evident that in this instance somebody blundered badly in invoking a law prohibiting solicitation of funds without a license.

To sponsors of the meeting and to the four Democratic Senators who addressed it the bungling obstructionists no doubt seem to be most valuable allies in their campaign against the court-packing plan. The mere suspicion that local machine politicians may have taken a hand in the arrests that preceded the rally emphasizes the importance of preserving the right of free speech and free assemblage. And the episode gives added solemnity and significance to Senator Gerry's warnings that an independent judiciary is the chief safeguard of religious and civil liberties.

One of the surest ways to stiffen popular opposition to executive usurpation of judicial power is to give the people a foretaste of the kind of thing that happens in countries where the courts are no longer free. The stupid tactics of the Pennsylvania officials are in the nature of an advance warning to Americans of what the future might hold in store for them if our Supreme Court judges should degenerate into political appointees of the President.

Whether through inadvertence or by intention, therefore, the bunglers have earned the gratitude of foes of the court plan. They have provided fresh arguments, moreover, in favor of Senator Burke's proposal to "bury all pending proposals" affecting the judiciary and leave Congress free to proceed with the important legislative work awaiting it.

The End of Capitulations.

At the end of this month the kingdom of Egypt is to be admitted to membership in the League of Nations. This action follows in natural course the abandonment by Great Britain of the quasi-protectorate it has exercised over that ancient land since the abolition of the actual protectorate established in 1914. The 1936 Anglo-Egyptian treaty was negotiated as between equals.

Egypt's status as a League member would have been anomalous indeed had it failed to secure consent of the powers to end capitulations. In the past there may have been some justification for the grant to foreigners of juridical and other privileges. But the system of capitulations is clearly an anachronism in the case of a power whose sovereignty is recognized by the world of nations.

To be sure Egypt is not the only nation still burdened by capitulations. China, for years, has tried unsuccessfully to rid itself of extraterritoriality, although it has succeeded in wiping out the restrictions formerly imposed on its right to tariff autonomy. What applies to Egypt applies with no less force to China. There, too, the existence of special rights enjoyed by some foreigners can no longer be justified.

Indeed, China will be greatly encouraged by the ease with which Egypt, once its sovereignty was fully recognized by Great Britain, is freeing itself from capitulations. The trouble that had been anticipated when the Montreux conference was called never materialized. All the nations participating in that meeting showed an encouraging readiness to wipe the slate clean so far as the special privileges enjoyed in Egypt by their own nationals were concerned.

Egypt, for its part, was equally co-operative. It has agreed to a transition period of 12 years during which the functions hitherto exercised by the consular courts will be taken over by mixed courts made up of Egyptian and foreign judges. It also secured the important right, hitherto withheld, of taxing foreigners.

At a time when the outlook for international co-operation appears gloomy, this concrete manifestation of a constructive co-operative spirit in the Montreux conference is indeed heartening.

September Morn.

To a generation which is still enduring the abysmal vulgarity of the "strip-tease," it is impossible to understand how so innocent a painting as "September Morn" could ever have aroused condemnation on the grounds of indecency. Yet a quarter of a century ago dispute on this very issue raged over this innocuous picture of an unclad bathing beauty.

The pleasant scene on the marshy shores of Lake Annecy, the work of Paul Chabas now dead in Paris at the age of 68, was, at best, a painting of relatively minor artistic merit. Few, if any, would now insist that it is in any sense shocking.

It was the prudes of those distant days of 1912, when "September Morn" was first exhibited, who catapulted the painting into world-wide notoriety. And they never realized that they had been egged on to do so as a publicity stunt. Had no attempt been made to suppress reproductions of the painting it would quickly have passed into the obscurity which it accidentally escaped. The attempt at censorship made the picture far better known to the general public than other and infinitely greater works.

It was a simpler, happier, more naive, and less sophisticated day, that brief era of "September Morn," a day that was so soon to be dissolved in the blood and turmoil of war. And not many beside Paul Chabas himself have continued to devote unquestioning admiration to his masterpiece. Bedridden during the last two years of his life, he always kept in view a copy of his famous picture. He, at least, realized the full appeal of that fragile and ephemeral charm which this simple painting earnestly sought to capture.

An ornithologist says a woodpecker doesn't drum in search for food, but because he enjoys hearing a sound of his own making. In the latter respect he differs little from an after-dinner speaker.

"Man Dies and Leaves 17 Farms."—Headline. You can scarcely blame him.

Art And Il Duce.

From the Memphis Commercial-Appeal.

Italy's Duce, while one may not approve of all his doings, surely must get credit for keeping busy. With crises popping all around like firecrackers on a Chinese holiday, he still finds time to argue with an English esthete over what amounts to art in staging a spectacle for the glory of Rome in the Colosseum.

Mussolini wants to present "Quo Vadis" in pageant form with the grand climax supplied by Primo Carnera wrestling with a lion, and certainly the sight of Old Leo and Old Satchel Foots locked in combat would be something. On the other hand, though, Mr. Gordon Craig, the English artist in question, wants to put on Bach's "Passion of Palestrina." Between these two points of view there is a vast gulf fixed, but with the decision in the hands of a Fascist committee, we have an idea it will be Satchel Foots and the lion.

In passing, Il Duce is guilty of an inaccuracy, anyhow. In the big scene of "Quo Vadis" mighty Ursus rushed forward to rescue his beautiful young princess from the horns of a great wild bull. And, as long as Congress and the House of Commons stay in session and go as they are, we greatly fear no audience these days will get any thrill out of seeing any one man throwing the bull. Like so many other industries, it has passed into the quantity production stage.

Opposes Daylight Time.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I note from the morning press, with a feeling nothing short of dismay that the District Commissioners will indorse the legislation to "give" the District "daylight saving" for the summer months on the assumption that it "accurately reflects Washington sentiment."

Since the people of the District, practically inarticulate through lack of representation, and therefore accustomed to take what they get and try to like it, have not been afforded an opportunity to express themselves on the subject, this assumption can at best be only a guess.

As a suburban resident for ten years, it has been my consistent experience that it is impossible to secure normal hours of rest during the summer, as children usually play noisily in the streets until approximately midnight on hot nights, leaving at best six or seven hours of quiet and comparative coolness for sleep—eight hours I believe is considered the normal requirement.

How many workers can afford still further loss of rest with consequent impairment of health and efficiency?

To compensate the District lack of transportation facilities, the Government departments already operate under stagger hours, some of them opening as early as 8 o'clock. Figure out the rising hour that will be necessary for these if we have to be at our desk at 7, 7:30 and so on.

Would it not in all fairness be advisable and practicable to submit a questionnaire, at least to the Government departments and commercial establishments, before imposing this drastic measure upon the District? May I not urge that the press of Washington undertake this service, securing the co-operation of the Government departments and stores to obtain a definite expression of our preference in this matter before granting this questionable boon.

Utopia For Politicians.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Hasn't the time arrived for our Utopian-minded politicians to check the "share-the-wealth" chatter, face facts, and devise some method to lighten the tax loads of an already burdened populace?

A more "cock-eyed" levy than the so-called District personal tax would be difficult to imagine. It should be supplanted, without further procrastination, with a tax that included, at least, a few elements of sense and sanity.

Year in and year out Mr. Average Man, who happens to reside here, is compelled to pay one-half of one per cent on practically everything he possesses in the way of securities, cash, and even jewelry.

Picture the plight of elderly people, attempting to make ends meet on a scant income and being forced to contribute what amounts to 10 per cent or more of this income, to the local personal tax assessor. It is not surprising that Washington people attempt in various ways to evade this abominable levy.

It is apparent that hosts of plundering politicians have established a Utopia for themselves and their colleagues, while the masses are burdened with an ever-expanding tax bag.

Rights In Strikes.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Now that the sit-down strikers are at it again, there are one or two questions I would like to ask. Whenever anyone objects to a lot of strikers sitting down in a factory, or other building, and preventing its use by its owners, a chorus of indignant voices asks, "Don't you think human rights are more important than property rights?" Yes, of course, but the people who invested in the corporation owning the factory—how about them; are they not human? Haven't they any rights?

One lot sat down in the engine room of an apartment house in New York City and announced their intention of shutting off water, light, heat and power until their demands had been complied with. How about the women and babies up in that building? Are they not human? And haven't they any rights? Is nobody human, or has any rights, except those who take orders from John L. Lewis?

The right to own property is an absolutely fundamental human right, and the protection of a lawful owner in the occupancy and use of his property is a fundamental duty of government, and second only to the duty of protecting the lives of its people.

Private Vs. Public Ownership.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The extraordinary extension of governmental activities as a result of New Deal legislation, combined as this is with unprecedented use of the spoils system, unquestionably is having the effect of slowing down the demand for public ownership and operation of public utilities.

The problem involves a choice of evils, and there is much to be said for and against public ownership of public utilities. With ordinary business the effect of competition is to serve the public at minimum cost But utilities are non-competitive monopolies, and the public is only protected by more or less dependable utility commissions.

Public ownership would save all the expense of lobbying, advertising, contributions to charities, chambers of commerce, civic clubs, etc. However, as a rule, private operation is far more efficient than is public operation, and the great waste of public money through the channels of New Deal experiments at the present time makes further extension of governmental activities prohibitive. Incidentally, it is well to remember that the public now pays fully three times too much for letter postage.

When real prosperity is achieved, when there is employment for all at satisfactory wages, it is conceivable that all public utilities might better be owned and operated by the Government; but that ideal condition seems to be a long way off. The first duty of Government at this time is to establish genuine prosperity. Public ownership of all public utilities may then follow.

Twelve Old Men.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Should the Congress enact the President's proposed plan for increasing the membership of the Supreme Court to 15 members, the following could happen:

1. In all probability he would appoint men under 60 years of age.

2. It is possible, according to the most authoritative insurance figures on life expectancy, that the six oldest members of the present Supreme Court will no longer be with us two years hence, or that most or all of them will have resigned.

3. That, in their places, the President will appoint six men not over 60 years of age to succeeed them.

Thus President Roosevelt may have the opportunity to appoint 12 new members of the Supreme Court, all under 60 years of age.

And, in consequence, the very condition he now complains of would be projected far into the future. If six members of the present court over 70 years of age makes for an intolerable condition, what might not be said of 12 members under the same or similar circumstances?

What would the President of 1950 think about the intolerable condition the President of 1937 wished upon him?

"Transition To Civil Service."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: May I tell you that I enjoyed your equitable editorial in The Post of May 9, Transition To Civil Service. I, like many others, employed under the alphabetical set-up, have reached the age where we are barred from civil service examinations. To sever our affiliation with the department without conferring on us the promised status (incorporated in the Democratic platform) would turn us adrift with the same hopeless feeling that we suffered during the dark days previous to the inception of the New Deal.

I sincerely trust that your publication will continue to endeavor to have our learned friends on the Hill redeem, at this session, their obligation to the Democratic voters, contracted at Philadelphia.

The Hindenburg Disaster.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: When, following the crash of the Hindenburg, Secretary Hull expressed his sympathy to the German government it was superfluous of President Roosevelt to send a message to Hitler. It is incompatible with the position and dignity of the President of the United States of America, the representative of the freest and most democratic country of the world, to send messages to a Hitler, a man who despises democracy and whose hands stick from the blood not only of German but also of Spanish defenders of freedom and democracy. Besides, did Hitler show his sympathy in our national disaster, when 500 children were blown to pieces and hundreds perished in the floods a few weeks ago? Everybody feels sympathy with the victims of the Hindenburg; but the President should not show a pro-Fascist attitude.

The German government expresses its grief in its own way. One day after the disaster in Lakehurst it issued an order forbidding Jews to obtain a doctors' degree henceforth, so taking away another chance of making a living from those who have prepared themselves for a profession they cannot practice in Germany, but which they will have to carry on in another country. Wotan and Baldur seem to be angry. Will they be propitiated by this sacrifice? It is significant for the Nazis' way of thinking that even in days of distress their hatred suffocates grief.

D. W. HARRIS.

Silver Spring, Md., May 10.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The tragic disaster to the dirigible Hindenburg raises again the question of the sale of our Government-owned helium to foreign nations. Since Germany is the only country to have had real success in the construction of these craft, that means sale of helium principally to Germany, for "commercial" purposes.

The only thing necessary to have turned the Hindenburg into the most dangerous war craft yet devised by the mind of man would have been a few hours for loading her with bombs and arming her with guns. This is exactly what was done when the Zeppelins made their famous attacks on London and other defenseless cities.

Strange how quickly these things are forgotten. My memory is long enough to go back to 1916 when the world was horrified by the deaths of hundreds of defenseless women and children in London—deaths no doubt quite as unpleasant as that suffered by the late Capt. Ernest Lehmann, who himself captained the Zeppelins in those very raids.

This 20-year-old history would not be worth bringing up again but for the fact that Germany seems even more intent on "shrecklichkeit" (frightfulness) than ever before. Judging by the public speeches of Herr Hitler, her brutality to her own citizens who happen to belong to minority groups, as well as by her part in the Spanish civil war (especially the bombing of the open town of Guernica), it would be madness to place yet another weapon in her hands.

It may yet be our own helium which will make possible the destruction of New York, Washington, Paris or London. Are we willing to take the responsibility?

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

Although Mussolini insists that fascism is not an export commodity and Hitler says the same of his type of lunacy, there comes a point in their relations with the free countries when they try to impose their peculiar ideas on the neighbors.

They both presume to suggest, even demand, that freedom of speech and freedom of the press be curtailed in countries which guarantee such freedom.

Inasmuch as impaired or limited freedom in these matters isn't freedom at all, what they require of us is the abolition of two very important rights. It makes no difference to them whether we and the British do this by violating our existing laws or by changing the laws in violation of our principles.

They just tell us what we have to do and leave the details to us—which is generous of them, to be sure.

The recent LaGuardia affair was an instance of interference. It may be true that the Little Flower was only campaigning when he said Hitler would shame Nero out of a chamber of horrors, or whatever it was that he did say, but unless you are going into a question of etiquette Fiorello's position was sound.

However, our laws don't deal with etiquette. Mayor LaGuardia was 'way inside the law, and if it comes to a matter of etiquette the mayor would have been justified if he had turned on Cordell Hull and given him the rough side fo his tongue for apologizing to Hitler in the name of the National Government. He could have said to Mr. Hull:

"Listen, you! What do you mean by deprecating the conduct of the lawfully elected Mayor of New York? Mind your own business."

And he would have been in the right, because, as Mr. Hull himself pointed out to Adolf, the National Government has neither authority nor responsibility in utterance of officials of the subdivisions. The National Government is so fastidious about their independence that it doesn't even tax their official salaries.

Mussolini hasn't given us any trouble, but he has been needling the British for a couple of years. His press, like Hitler's, is strictly official. No Italian or German newspaper dares print anything contrary to instructions or omit anything sent down from the press-and-propaganda bureau with the "Must" 'stamp on it.

* * * *

So when Mussolini's papers print dirty pieces about the British and even incite riots around the British Embassy in Rome, as they have done, those pieces are really state documents and the official sentiments of Popeye himself.

On the other hand, when a British paper plucks a little fuzz off Popeye's chest and blows it in his face with a reference to Adowa or Caporetto, or the dashing retreats of the Black Shirts in Spain, that is an independent utterance.

The reason Mussolini burns up at these references is that he has spent 14 years trying to make the world and Italy think of the Italians as conquerors. But the British government isn't responsible. The cabinet members probably do get some private enjoyment out of these reminders of occasions when the invincible legions ran like hares, but they know every nation has its own raw spots. The only difference is that Mussolini can't take it. He can dish it, but he can't take it at all.

After LaGuardia tossed off his crack about Adolf the Nazi papers turned on the heat, and the most flattering thing they said about the American people was that we were a race who kept our hats on indoors, put our feet on the table and spat chewing gum on the walls.

* * * *

That was the official utterance of the Nazi government, and there is no debate whatever on that point. Can you imagine what would have happened to any editor who had printed that remark without official approval?

Yet they are demanding that this country revoke freedom of speech to prevent unfriendly utterances by minor officials in the subdivisions of the Nation. And then they went further and threatened to interfere in our domestic affairs, although in their country Americans are forbidden by law to organize internal interference and don't care enough about Germany to do it, anyway.

In both cases there is only one thing to do. The free countries must look them dead in the eye, stamp on their corns and tell them to go to hell. Otherwise they will run us ragged, apologizing, explaining, curtailing our rights until we shall be no better off than they.

Our Bloody Present.

By an exhaustive study of the social and cultural developments of the last 25 centuries, Dr. Pitrim A. Sorokin, of Harvard, has concluded that the age we are now living in is the bloodiest in history. For the average man of today, says the scientist, there are several thousand fewer chances of his dying peacefully than there were in the age of Genghis Khan and the early Inquisition. The reason given for this is the breaking down of the existing cultural system of the western world. The oncoming generations are rejecting long accepted principles of art, literature, religion, government and even science. Such transition periods are always marked with struggle, says the doctor, and this one, being the most momentous of such periods, is therefore the bloodiest.

It is striking that Dr. Sorokin's general thesis echoes what other social observers—Pareto, of Italy; Ortega, of Spain, and Spengler, of Germany—have already asserted. The rising flood of isms which have been engulfing country after country of Europe during this generation, too, would seem to bear him out. There is no need to shudder at the fact that these unprecedented changes are taking place, but there is a very definite need to bring about the changes peacefully, lest the unprecedented bloodiness of our times wipe us out before the changes are accomplished.

A Mid-Week Review of Current Publications

The Tocsin's Tune

By Ray O. Hummel, Jr.

COL. Palmer's latest book dealing with the World War is something of a synthesis of his earlier publications on the same subject. Already an experienced war observer when the World War broke out, his experience as press correspondent in France from 1914 to 1916 and his later position, as an officer in our Army, as chief of the press division, gave Col. Palmer an almost unequaled opportunity to observe at first hand what our participation in the war involved, both at home and abroad.

In this "simple chronicle," as he terms it, he tells briefly of the outbreak of the war, our early sentiments, our prosperity and profits and our final entry into the struggle. Then, in some greater detail, are related the events of our mobilization of men and supplies, their transport and training and their actual combat in France. The one great redeeming feature of the situation, and that from which the title of the book is drawn, is, he says, that we expected no territory or other reward, that we made war in a crusading spirit in the belief that we had a mission."

Thus he does not believe that we entered the war because of the bankers, or for profits, or "to save our own necks." The latter he considers most absurd, for he sees no danger for the United States from a Germanic invasion. We were, he says, gradually brought in by the "train of events"—submarines, broken promises by Germany, powerful propaganda by the allies—all working to produce the final definite step. Perhaps he oversimplifies the case; certainly he gives little weight to the "economic causes" which have been stressed so much of late.

As for the next war, if such there be, Col. Palmer sees two "musts" if we wish to keep out: Embargo on munitions and an end of freedom of the seas. Col. Palmer's abhorrence of war is well stated in his last sentence, "There is no more argument in favor of war than in favor of going to bed with a rattlesnake or a plague-infected rat."

IN "Claude Kitchin and the Wilson War Policies," Prof. Arnett has written about an important but little remembered figure of World War days. Had Kitchin not been the Democratic floor leader in the House of Representatives his opposition to our entrance probably would not have brought down upon him nearly the amount of condemnation that it did. That he was widely and severely attacked, was misrepresented, and his honesty and ability doubted, is a matter of record. It is Prof. Arnett's purpose to "rectify these grossly distorted impressions" of Kitchin and to restore him to his rightful place in the pages of history.

From a study of the Kitchin papers Prof. Arnett seems to have settled a question which has puzzled historians—that of the so-called "Sunrise Conference." He believes that it was undoubtedly held in April, 1916, at the time of the Sussex crisis, and not in February when the warning resolutions were being discussed. This the author declares to be rather significant and from the evidence in the papers he thinks that Kitchin, Champ Clark and Flood (chairman of the House Foreign Relations Committee) had found at this conference that Wilson wished to go to war with Germany and had persuaded him not to. Thus for the slogan "He kept us out of war" Prof. Arnett substitutes "We kept him out of war."

It was Kitchin's opposition to the war resolution that brought the first real "bombardment" on him. That he was inspired by "unadulterated selfishness or by cowardice" was among the milder statements made. And even though he determined to support the war once we were in, abuse did not cease, for he wanted to make those who profited most pay for the war, and favored high income and excess profits taxes. He was described as having a "ground-glass mind" and as being a "political imbecile" aiming at "destruction of wealth." A leading political commentator, who is still writing, pictured Kitchin as a "babe in the woods . . . an awkward child . . . who neutralized sympathy by trying to cover up helplessness with flippancy and a bullying manner towards his fellow members."

Some movements were made to remove him as floor leader but they got nowhere and in 1921 the Democratic Party showed that it held no hard feelings by nominating him for speaker. He died in 1923.

This book gives a picture of Kitchin as a capable, hardworking and sincere man who held strong convictions (the Republican Party he conceived as a conspiracy of the vested interests to exploit the masses). It is a pity, however, that the author often strays from the paths of history to point morals and to air his own views as to the causes of war, how to prevent them, the evil influence of munitions makers, etc.

• • • •

WHILE Col. Palmer and Prof. Arnett are dealing with the past, Mr. Hallgren in "The Tragic Fallacy" is concerned chiefly with what the future may bring for the United States in the way of war. Claude Kitchin would probably have agreed with much in this book, which is an historical survey and interpretation of America's war policy, especially since the turn of the century. Mr. Hallgren's thesis is that war can be the only result of our military policy, that it is not intended as preparing us solely for "defense" but is aimed at an offensive and aggressive war, that Japan is the chief country against which our plans are being made and that when the war comes there will be imposed upon the country a dictatorship more rigid than our country has ever experienced.

There can be little disagreement with most of his statements, which are well supported by citations from Army and Navy hearings and reports, that the military men desire to increase our armed forces. Because, probably quite correctly, he can find no possible invader of the United States and because the military experts have said that their programs do not call merely for a defense of the actual soil of the 48 States, Mr. Hallgren assumes that our military policy is not defensive, but offensive.

Many people will not agree with him as to his definition of "defense." Some would say that this is Mr. Hallgren's fallacy, for he gives this word a very limited meaning—defense of the shores of this country. To many, defense also would include the protection of citizens and property anywhere. Whether this be justifiable or not, it is "defense" to many. If the people want a force just large enough to prevent invasion Mr. Hallgren probably has a good case as to our safety. If, however, "defense" is taken to mean both the protection of soil and "interests," his case is less strong. He seems very sure that the American people agree with him.

To Mr. Hallgren, war is the fate of a capitalist society and is inevitable. And if one breaks out in Europe we cannot escape being drawn in, for our capitalistic economic system could not stand the only way we could keep out: give up our foreign trade. Depression would set in and it would take no great amount of propaganda to get the country into war, he says. Taking profits out of war will not disturb the basic causes of imperialist war, he says, for they lie not in the profits of war but in the profits of peace, and capitalists are willing to have their war profits cut when they see great after-war profits.

Mr. Hallgren gives evidence to show that our military policy is based on Japan being our enemy and that if the war does come a strict dictatorship, planned by military men, will be invoked. He sees in the NRA a possible "dress rehearsal" for this war-time dictatorship. There is probably little doubt but that there would be some sort of centralized control, perhaps even as rigid as is pictured in this book.

On Looking Backward

Alexander Black Recounts His 77 Years; Englishman Visits U. S. With Father's Diary.

"TIME AND CHANCE," by Alexander Black (Farrar & Rinehart, $3.50).

I never read "The Great Desire," "Jo Ellen," or "Stacey" in fact, I never heard of Alexander Black, who wrote them. But, having just finished his "Time and Chance," with its more revealing sub-title, "Adventures With People and Print," I should like to have.

He is now 77. His business was writing, in the main. He was a newspaperman, an editor, a novelist. Public speaker for a time, he also created picture plays—with President Cleveland at his desk at the White House as one of his characters—long before motion pictures were ever heard of. The high spots of his six-decade career he has put down in this book.

"It will be plain (he writes in a preface which, written last, is placed first) that I have been interested in prize fighters as well as pointers, actors, musicians and adventurers. If I have been attracted by writers most of all that is as it happened and because this book is about the emotions of this man, Me, himself."

While he was Sunday editor of the New York World, his contributors included O. Henry, Margaret Ayer, Irvin Cobb and Zona Gale. He persuaded Emma Goldman to write "What I Believe" for the front page of his editorial section one week; another time Commodore Peary wrote (and laid out the "art" for) a page describing his proposed dash to the pole. He knew them all—and more.

From this it might be concluded that the book would interest only a writer or editor. I don't believe this is so. I think any one with an interest in the New York scene from 1880 on would like it. There's far more than mere anecdote and reminiscence in it. There's graceful writing: "Tregaskis moved about the world like a visiting humorist in a madhouse." There's a reflected serenity that is refreshing: "I still don't know anything about theology, but I know the kind of God I like." There's Scotch humor, there's information, there's description.

JOHN M. CLARK.

"AMERICA AFTER SIXTY YEARS," the travel diaries of two generations of Englishmen, by M. Philips Price. (George Allen and Unwin, Ltd., $3.)

Here is a happy dose of economics, history, and social study, so pleasantly administered that even the lightest reader will enjoy it, to say nothing of the reader who chooses his books for the intellectual benefits to be derived.

M. Philips Price, M. P., the author, is an enterprising Englishman who had the good fortune to have a father, Capt. W. E. Price, M. P., who kept comprehensive diaries of his trips to the United States in 1869 and 1878. They were excellent diaries, and the present Price, M. P., makes them more so by comments and comparisons on his father's notes in the diary of his own trip to this country in 1934.

The elder Price was a geologist at heart and the excerpts from his diaries and letters include some interesting geological data on the United States, in addition to his comments regarding the people, economic conditions, and social customs. Expansion was the business of the day during both of his expeditions to this country. He noted with wonder the crack transcontinental trains which often attained the speed of 50 miles per hour!

He was impressed with Detroit, a "junction where they sometimes made as many as fifteen railway carriages a day." He approved heartily of American young women; was charmed by those of the South, most of whom had spent some years in Europe, and also by the northern girls, who were "thorough Americans, but very lady-like."

The younger Price also got a favorable impression of the United States. A British liberal, it did not take long for him to become a New Deal convert. Many features of the New Deal he suggests should be incorporated in the British system of government.

The principal difference he notes between Northern and Southern people is that the latter, first of all, point with pride to their Dixieland; while the northerner says, "Look at our United States; aren't we grand?"

Rights And Wrongs Of Medicine

American Foundation Compiles Views Of Profession.

Problems Of Health Are Found Tied To Economics.

WASHINGTON MEDICAL SCENES.

By Arthur C. Christie, M. D.

There has just been published by the American Foundation for Studies in Government a voluminous report entitled "American Medicine, Expert Testimony Out of Court." The report is in reality a massive collection of quotations from 5,000 letters from 2,100 physicians, with connecting explanatory remarks by the editors. The editing has been done with skill and discrimination and with no attempt to draw conclusions or to formulate recommendations.

The physicians, whose letters are quoted, represent general practitioners, all types of specialists, public health officers, deans of medical schools and hospital administrators in both governmental and private institutions. They are scattered through every State of the Union in both urban and rural communities.

The letters were sent to the American Foundation in reply to the following question:

Has your experience led you to believe that a radical reorganization of medical care in this country is indicated? If so, in what direction? If you do not believe that radical reorganization is indicated, what, if any changes or revisions in the present system would you like to see made? What evolutionary possibilities would you stress?

In the foreword, written by Dr. Truman G. Schnabel, associate professor of medicine at the University of Pennsylvania, the following statement is made:

The intent and purpose of this report is to illuminate and not to prove. Those who hoped for a numerical report that so many are for "State medicine" and so many against will be disappointed. The material that has come to us is adapted to no such superficial handling. The letters are, in the main, the mature and profound and poignantly sincere thought of men in the field who recognize that there is a problem of subtle composition and who would like to see it solved, not by facile experimentation on a broad and untried scale, but by experiment guided by all the resources both of science and of statesmanship.

Although the report is composed of innumerable quotations expressing every conceivable point of view on most of the important socio-economic subjects connected with medicine, the material is so well arranged as to make it readable and interesting. One may find quoted statements there to bolster almost any shade or variety of opinion which one happens to favor, but even though there is no definite concensus on a single one of the subjects discussed there are still strong indications of the general trend of thought among those whose letters make up the report.

• • • •

The following impressions are strong in the mind of the present writer after a fairly careful reading of the entire report:

(1) Problems of health and medical care are bound up with many other social and economic problems such as low wages, inadequate food, clothing and shelter.

(2) There are those who recommend various types of voluntary or compulsory health insurance, but the general trend of the recommendations is rather strongly against any type of health insurance except that provided by recognized insurance companies in their regular health and accident policies. The opinion is general that insurance medicine will result in lowering the quality of medical service and so far as cost is concerned will merely "substitute hidden taxes for direct taxes."

(3) Insurance for hospitalization, in contrast to health insurance, receives quite general approval. It is strongly emphasized, however, that it is very limited in its application and that it may give rise to evils by fostering unsound plans of health insurance.

(4) The last chapter of the report entitled "Limited State Medicine and Private Practice," is probably the most important. In it there is much discussion of the extent to which the State already concerns itself with matters of health and control and treatment of disease. In the control of communicable disease and in the care and treatment of the tuberculous and the mentally ill, State medicine is already a fact. Other diseases, notably syphilis and cancer, are strongly recommended for complete State care. There are many who think that chronic diseases which require long hospitalization, such as arthritis and heart disease, should be cared for by the State.

Altogether the report is an excellent cross section of the medical viewpoint on many important problems of health and medical care. There is no assumption that the doctor alone can solve all of these problems, but it seemed to the American Foundation "that the group best qualified to define the problem in the first instance is the qualified medical men of the country."

It is fair to say that the answer to the original question propounded to the doctors "Has your experience led you to believe that a radical reorganization of medical care in this country is indicated?" is preponderantly "No, but evolutionary changes are necessary which will strike a proper balance between State control and private practice."

Detectives

Belloc Lowndes Reprint; Murder In A Hospital.

"THE CHINK IN THE ARMOUR," by Mrs. Belloc Lowndes. (Longmans Green, $2.)

"MURDER WALKS THE CORRIDORS," by James D. Perry. (Macmillan, $2.)

In response to a petition signed by Hemingway, Woollcott and Pearson (Edmund) Longmans Green has reprinted Mrs. Belloc Lowndes' story of a pretty English widow, who narrowly escapes a horrid death in a French resort town. One agrees with those three redoubtable experts in tales of death or destruction that the last 50 pages of Mrs. Lowndes' quiet story are, indeed, hair raising. Unfortunately, the first 250 pages are not.

Through 23 chapters, the heroine, Sylvia Bailey, remains blandly unaware of the danger closing in on her. In all too short a time, the reader may come to feel, as this one did, that Sylvia is as stupid as she is lovely. Her prewar innocence becomes a trifle irksome. Prewar in thought, too, is the quotation from which Mrs. Lowndes got the title for her story: "But there is one chink in the chain armour of civilized communities. Society is conducted on the assumption that murder will not be committed." Not nowadays it isn't.

In contrast, James D. Perry's tale of murder in a hospital is very 1937. It moves with economy and dispatch. It's full of people about whom one can make all manner of assumptions, including murder.

Don't give it to that friend who is convalescing from an appendectomy. He may come to regard his prettiest nurse with dark suspicion. The story will be deeply relished by all persons who don't like hospitals anyway, and by anyone who enjoys a fairly rapid mystery novel. AUDREY WALZ.

Aran Hero.

"HERO BREED," by Pat Mullen (Robert McBride, $2.50).

Pat Mullen was born on Aran Island and he writes well of his people in "Hero Breed." Hugh O'Donnell, his central character, is a hero in the Beowulf tradition and from the time he is 16 his courage and strength are the talk of the island.

Mr. Mullen has utilized a rich store of information in writing his book—old stories of the islanders, their practical jokes, little incidents of their daily lives, their great moments when they battle for life with wind and storm. "Hero Breed" has few dull pages, so swiftly does it move from one event to another. Always, whether in the midst of romance, church-going or poteen smuggling, there is time and place for a fight.

Wild Animals

Two Americans Spy On Their Neighbors.

"WILDERNESS WANDERERS," by Wendell and Lucie Chapman, (Scribner's, $3.75).

It is a strange paradox that in America where interest in nature is a trait of the people, such devastation of natural resources has been permitted. So great has been the destruction (even extermination) by man that it is impossible for us now to picture the vast fauna and flora that once was America's. Americans are today waking up to the precarious state of their wildlife, forests, and soil and at least are making an effort to do something about it. Sometimes it looks pretty hopeless; There are so many opposing factors, so many interests to be catered to, so many anomalies. The big-game herds, for example, may be on the increase, but what's to be done with the surplus? Yellowstone visitors insist on feeding the bears, the bears get ugly, want more food, and have to be shot. Who's to blame?

Such problems as these are the underlying burden of this new book by the Chapmans, "their adventures among wild animals in mountain solitudes" mostly in and around Yellowstone Park. Whether they are describing a buffalo roundup, a skiing trip over the Continental Divide in a blizzard, a hazardous climb to photograph mountain goats, or more placid observations at a beaver pond, they never fail to find adventure, unembellished by fiction; and one does not read far before he knows that this couple are no ordinary observers of wildlife and that their attitude toward it is a most salutary and civilized one. They show a flashlight photo of a live grizzly bear. "This picture," Mr. Chapman says, "cost six nights of sleep." Contrast this with a bear hunt of 30 years ago described by a world-famed naturalist:

"The bear had but a minute or two to live . . . When within half a dozen steps of the black, angered beast I fired again, breaking the spine at the root of the neck; and down went the bear stark dead, slain in the canebrake in true hunter fashion."

The Chapmans planned and saved for 11 years to be able to go wherever they chose, stay as long as they wished, do whatever they pleased. They felt "life was drifting by and we were catching only snatches of a fuller existence."

Mention must be made of excellent illustrations this book has. There are over 60 full-page plates of them, showing no less than 23 species of mammals and birds as well as many scenic shots. All of them were taken by the Chapmans and well illustrate the remarkable success they have had in photographing wild animals in action. The book, too, has an index, though not overly complete. Unfortunately, there are evidences of rather careless proofreading, but let us hope the book goes into a second printing so that these may be eliminated.

In A New Bottle

By Elizabeth Ford

IN THE same year that Sinclair Lewis' "Arrowsmith" and F. Scott Fitzgerald's "Great Gatsby" climbed up on the top of the book bandwagon, Phyllis Bottome's novel of war-gashed Austria, "Old Wine," excited some commendatory cheers—and passed out of sight. That was in 1926. And a lot of ink has flowed under the presses since then.

Now, a dozen years later, "Old Wine" comes back in a new bottle in a reprint edition. The publishers declare to goodness that with the popularity of Miss Bottome's "Private Worlds," of which you may have seen something at the neighborhood nickelodeon, its author has reached such a state of stature that in the course of human events it becomes necessary to reissue her earlier works.

Naturally—time being what it is—the Austria she writes about it not quite the same country in which one youngish man spent five months gathering edelweiss. It had not yet seen Dolfuss and it had not yet added the word Nazi to its German-Slav vocabulary. Its air was still filled with the falling feathers of the moulting imperial eagles and its street corners were noisy with righteous indignation that a Hapsburg could be residing, in chilly exile, among the snows of Switzerland. There was talk of marching him home again to rococo glories of empty palaces via Budapest.

MISS BOTTOME'S novel opens on the day that Kaiser Karl hocks his throne. The news is received in three different ways by three men who belong to the class that will be most affected by it.

There is Count Otto Wolkenheimb, whose glistening existence up until now has had for stage props a 300-room castle at Trauenstein, the best horses and the best people. There is Prince Franz Salvator, young, warworn—a misplaced Siegfried in a defeated uniform. And there is Eugen Erody, impeccable confidante of archdukes and collector of fine glass, fine furniture, fine existence. With their eggshell world in cracked pieces at their feet, they shudder in the shifting winds of autumn, 1918.

It is Otto, loath to lose the lap luxuries to which he has been bred, who sells out to the new masters and after a few shady deals—one of them involving the ruin of an Austrian steamship company—comes out on top of the heap. Eugen, his lifelong friend, unwillingly supports Otto in his climb for power and receives thereby the percentage of disillusion which ruins him. Franz and his sister, Eugenie, dress their pride in poverty and turn to grubbing a new life out of crumbs.

• • • •

WHEN Otto meets an American girl, reputed to have money, he determines to marry her. Carol is really in love with Franz, but impatient at his submission to the hard heel of misfortune, she allows herself to become engaged to Otto. In the meantime, there are rumors that Karl, indigent Hapsburg, hopes to return from his mountain Elba. Otto smashes the coup d'etat with a hundred thousand pounds—his share of the treacherous shipping deal—because he fails to see profit for himself any longer in the renovation of the old regime.

And then he discovers that Carol's American fortune is just so much puff and that she is worth no more and no less than the $50 a week which she earns as correspondent on a paper. Eventually, to save his skin, he marries, not Carol, but a woman whose unscrupulous opportunism has made her notorious. At the final throw, Otto is pillowed in success and smothered in disintegration.

That, in brief, is the plot though it has other ramifications which include other characters. We tell you just exactly how it works out because in a story of this kind, plot is not the mainspring and you lose none of the interest of the book by knowing it ahead of time. The bouquet of "Old Wine" is in its style.

• • • •

IT belongs in that class of prose pyrotechnics sometimes disparagingly spoken of as fine writing. Only Miss Bottome's restrained and calculated artistry saves it from lushing over into bad taste and purple plush. With sentences as perfect in their beat as the one-two-three of a Wiener Waltz, it never simpers down to mere "prettiness"—though it comes close to it at times.

There are occasions when the characters talk as if they had their hands on their breasts and their eyes on the gallery.

Take this, for instance:

Eugen, discovering that Otto has betrayed the Emperor, announces the fact that they can no longer be friends.

"You leave me" (asks Otto) "to lead my life alone?"

"You have chosen a life I cannot lead with you."

"But you, what will you do with yourself? You have no life but mine!"

Out of its context, that sounds a little too smooth to be real and a little too theatrical to be convincing. And yet by benefit of her cadenced syle, Miss Bottome is frequently able to pull off effects—genuinely dramatic effects—that are worth reading.

Fine writing, of course, shines at its best in descriptive passages like these:

"There was no expression in his eyes. They were like a toy of beautifully polished Chinese boxes: each box contains a smaller one, until the last is reached—and that is empty."

• • • •

IN drawing her picture of Carol Hunter, the American girl, the author fell down and went boom. What happens is that Carol turns out to be a perfect and horrid example of what some misguided Britishers consider really American. Slang and shaky grammar seem to be her outstanding attributes and under that layer of superficial characterization there doesn't seem to be much flesh and blood left. In other words, poor Carol never does get a chance to take one good, living breath. Princess Eugenie, the sister of Franz Salvator, gets a better deal. Threadbare nobility—autumnal beauty—here is where the author splashes big.

If you have plenty of time to spend on the fine points of style and the delicate interplay of emotion upon emotion, then "Old Wine" is your order. It's not a book you can read in a hurry.

One warning: Either Miss Bottome or her publishers decided to go off on a typographical junket and the effect is confusing. Words spoken by different characters are not separately paragraphed but run into one long page. In mental arithmetic, so far as this reviewer can make out, this device subtracts from, rather than adds to, the total effect. But then, of course, that's just an opinion. You may like it that way.

Mexico's Poor Indians

A Mexican Writes On The Natives In Novel Based On Their Problems.

"EL INDIO," by Gregory Lopez y Fuentes. (Bobbs-Merrill, $2.50.)

Although everyone and his brother may seem to be writing a book about Mexico, it is seldom, indeed, that the American reading public is privileged to glimpse the work of a real Mexican author. Lopez y Fuentes is a Mexican author "on all four sides," as his countrymen say, and in this book he has said something a little different about Indians.

Yet, I cannot say that this book aroused me to any great pitch of enthusiasm. Why must we forever be given the same outline of characters in Mexican novels, be they written by Americans or by natives? Why must the same plodding characters pass in review, few of them giving us a pleasurable moment, almost all of them based on some series of prejudices which the author has built up from his own personal experience, and, usually, from an inadequate knowledge of historical factors which have produced present-day Mexico?

Granted that the life of the Indians can be most interesting, I do not find this volume particularly attractive because of the grip it takes on you. Characters without names may seem very enticing when placed in publishers' blurbs, but one has a devil of a time keeping track of them. Indians may, in general, be very marvelous people in their own back yards, but the history of primitive races shows that it did not take the white man's invasion to teach them all the evil they know. They had a goodly supply of that commodity long before the white sails of Cortes' ships moved into the harbor that lies outside of Vera Cruz. And they, I believe, would be the first to admit the truth of this statement.

To get down to cases, Senor Lopez y Fuentes has written a story about Indian village life that reminds somewhat of Dr. Redfield's justly famous sociological study, "Tepoztlan." There is the same attention to daily routine, to superstitions, to marriage customs, to communal life in general.

All in all, "El Indio" is a glimpse of Indian problems from the standpoint of a man who wants to tell about them novelistically, without suggesting any solution to them. Free distribution of land loses its value when the men are asked to march long and travel far in political parades to support those who secured the land for them. New schools are built with Indian labor, but Indians who do not speak Spanish have a hard time learning anything. Fine roads may be worthwhile to somebody, but Indians of this class do not drive automobiles.

Lopez y Fuentes deserves credit for having won Mexico's first prize novel contest. He is evidently sincere and his work was worth a translation, very well done, incidentally, by Miss Anita Brenner, who has been in Mexico often enough to know a chirimia from a chirimoya. If you like Diego Rivera's murals, you ought to be able to swallow his illustrations for this book.

Jordon to Win Fight for Life, Is Belief Here

Victory on New Evidence, or Presidential Action, Is Expected.

never called as witnesses at Jordon's trial. These persons were known to the police; in fact, three of them were policemen. The question is being asked—and will continue to be asked—as to why they were not put on the witness stand when the man's life was at stake.

Description Different.

Three policemen—F. J. Haack, Thomas F. Heide and Sergt. M. J. Mahaney—have told Department of Justice officials that Mrs. Jaynes, before she died, described the two holdup men, one of whom shot her, as six-footers. Jordon is only 5 feet 6¼.

None of the three policemen were called as witnesses at the trial.

A police incidental, or lookout, was broadcast at the time of the shooting which described the holdup men as 6 footers. This was not mentioned in the trial. It was dug up last month by Attorney John M. Holzworth, after he had been given a tip by a newspaper reporter.

A woman who could have given important testimony was Mrs. Frank J. Bell, who lives near the Garden T-Shoppe. Her name was in the possession of the police, but she was never called as a witness. Recently, however, she told Department of Justice investigators that she talked to Mrs. Jaynes directly after the shooting, and that Mrs. Jaynes described the man who shot her as "a thin, tall man, gray eyes and light hair." Jordon not only is short, but has dark eyes and dark hair.

Why Mrs. Bell was never called at the trial is another question that may harass the local authorities in the future.

The controversy over Jordan's counsel was carried into the court of Justice F. Dickinson Letts yesterday. Jordan was called to court to hear Justice Letts recall the death warrant and in accordnce with President Roosevelt's respite, set June 14 as the day of the execution.

Attorney Change Asked.

This procedure disposed of, Justice Letts ordered that it be noted on the record that Attorney Holzworth was no longer Jordan's counsel. Jordan, who had written to the court the day before asking for Holzworth's withdrawal from the case, told Justice Letts that the New Yorker had put him in a false position with the public.

"I am not proud that I am an ex-convict," Jordan said. "But I am fighting for my life and I feel that I would tell the exact truth."

He quoted from a letter to Holzworth in which he said:

"My position here demands absolute truth and fairness. In this you have failed."

Friction Cited.

The condemned man said there had been friction between Holzworth, who entered the case last month, and Harry T. Whelan, who took over the case a year ago after Jordon's original counsel, Richard P. Bowman, was drowned. Bowman was Whelan's brother-in-law.

Whelan yesterday told Justice Letts that he would continue his efforts on Jordon's behalf, but that it was difficult to co-operate with Holzworth. Justice Letts praised Whelan, saying to Jordon:

"Your counsel has merited the esteem of this court both for his attainments and as a man. Mr. Whelan will do everything possible as a lawyer in your behalf."

Attorney Holzworth announced last night that he would appear before Justice Letts at 10 o'clock this morning and demand a hearing. No notice of yesterday's procedure was given him, he said, and therefore the action taken in dismissing him as counsel was null and void.

"I want to tell the court," he said, "that whoever represents Jordon should be properly qualified and should see to it that he is not again railroaded."

House Moves To Slash Grants For CCC Relief

minority member of the Appropriations committee, said flatly he will not support it.

Taber has a plan of his own. As ranking member, he will offer in the House a motion to recommit the relief bill, to provide for a relief appropriation of only $600,000,000, he said last night. Under the Taber plan, WPA would be abolished, and $100,000,000-a-month allocations would be made to the States for only six months in the year—November 1 to May 1. Funds, allocated on a basis of population, would be administered by the States.

Bacon said he will cut appropriations under this plan from $1,250,000,000 to $1,000,000,000, if the full House Appropriations Committee approves the lower figure. He said he will offer the plan as a "substitute" for the President's estimates.

$300,000,000 for PWA.

Torn between the relative merits of WPA and PWA, a public works bloc in the House earlier in the day voted to earmark $300,000,000 out of the relief fund for PWA. This agreement followed an 11-to-11 tie vote on a motion to seek the $300,000,000 for PWA in addition to $1,500,000,000 for WPA.

Later, Representative Alfred F. Beiter (Democrat), New York, leader of the bloc, announced alternative methods of procedure. If the Appropriations Committee reports a $1,500,000,000 bill, he will seek a $300,000,000 earmarking for PWA, he said. If it recommends $1,000,000,000 instead, he will seek only $150,000,000 of it for PWA.

As retrenchment enthusiasm revived in the House, the Appropriations Committee reported a $115,871,265 Interior Department bill, with some $4,741,340 amputated from Budget Bureau estimates—the largest proportionate reduction in any supply bill. The figure recommended was $5,773,997 under last year's appropriation. The Interior bill is the last of the regular departmental measures.

CCC Vote Unexpected.

Entirely unexpected was the House 224-to-34 vote for a two-year limitation on the Civilian Conservation Corps, which the President had urged be made permanent. The vote came on a motion by Representative Fritz G. Lanham (Democrat), of Texas. The limitation had the full support of House Republicans, but Lanham beat Minority Leader Snell to the gun.

Prompt Democratic support of the motion—a direct rebuff to the President—was said to involve more than economy considerations. Some Democrats said members were in a better position to obtain CCC camps and camp patronage with CCC as an emergency agency than if it were in the permanent set-up.

Fechner's Salary Cut.

As a further economy gesture, the House cut the salary of Robert Fechner, CCC director, from $12,000 to $10,000, on motion of Representative John E. Miller (Democrat), of Arkansas. Intact against a further increase, as the House adjourned, was the bill's provision for 315,000 in maximum CCC enrollments.

At the other end of the Capitol, Senator Elbert D. Thomas (Democrat), of Utah, said the CCC should be made a permanent institution. He would amend the law to permit enrollment of alien minors, and lift the present restrictions to "needy" youths.

Tydings' warning of another depression ahead came as the Marylander lined up with Senators Clark, Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, and King (Democrat), of Utah, against the Gilbertsville Dam project. "Justifying" the dam as a part of the flood control, navigation and power program were Senators Norris (Independent), of Nebraska; McKellar (Democrat), of Tennessee, and Barkley (Democrat), of Kentucky.

Depression Cited.

Byrnes cited testimony by TVA and Budget Bureau officials that a year's survey was needed before an exact dam location could be fixed, and agreement of these officials not to ask immediately for the funds proposed in the second deficiency bill.

Tydings said a depression had been predicted by Chairman Marriner Eccles of the Federal Reserve Board, former Vice President Dawes and "all of the economists" for 1939 or 1940.

"When that comes, as it must come, what are we going to do?" asked Tydings.

"One out of every $50 taken in by the Treasury in revenues will go to this dam, benefiting one area only. One out of every $10 of the taxpayers' money has gone or will go into this particular area. I want to know why?"

Despondent Man Kills Self by Gun

Despondent over ill health, Mason Leonard Chambers, 28, shot himself in the heart yesterday morning in his sister's home at 1237 Sixth street southwest. He was pronounced dead by a doctor from Casualty Hospital.

Leaving a note declaring "I can't go on like this. I don't have anyone to blame but myself," Chambers fired a bullet from a .38-caliber revolver through his heart in an upstairs room.

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald issued a certificate of suicide. The man's father, Frank Chambers, of 107 Rock Creek Church road northwest, was notified by police.

Approval for 4 Of D. C. Taxing Plans Forecast

000 a year in Federal funds. This appropriation, recommended by the Bureau of Public Roads, would have become operative in the fiscal year 1939.

Frankly puzzled as to their next step after Corporation Counsel Elwood H. Seal had raised doubts as to the legality of a District income tax, members of the Kennedy subcommittee suggested a sales tax or a combination business privilege and sales tax as a substitute.

Representative Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, estimated that a 1 per cent general sales tax on the District's $335,000,000 retail trade would yield more than $3,000,000. Subsequently, he suggested a 1½ per cent levy.

Immediate opposition, however, came from Representative Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, chief advocate of the income tax.

"Falls on Least Able."

"The trouble with a sales tax," he said, "is that the burden falls on those least able to pay.

"John Brown with an income of $100,000 a year may not eat any more than John Doe who supports a family on $20 a week; yet the tax on both is the same."

Seal challenged the constitutionality of the income tax plan, drafted at the instruction of the cub-committee, on the ground that it might be held illegal if Federal employes were included or if too many exemptions were allowed.

Strengthening of the intangible personal property tax, which Seal recommended be continued regardless of whether or not an income tax act is passed, was considered by the sub-committee.

"Teeth" Are Wanted.

After Fred D. Allen, tax assessor, had estimated that an extra $1,000,000 might be raised if "teeth are put in the intangible law," Chairman Kennedy said he would favor such legislation.

"I think we should keep the intangible tax law," he said, "even if we do recommend an income tax bill and should credit payments under it on income tax assessments."

He added that he would support Allen's proposal that the assessor's office be given authority to examine the records of corporations in making personal property assessments.

Under the present law, Allen explained, the District must either accept or reject a return made by a corporation as to its intangible assets, but cannot check up on the veracity of the statement.

The sub-committee did not reach the income and sales tax proposals in its off-the-record discussion, but a decision probably will be reached at the next conference tomorrow morning.

Following the parley Kennedy indicated he would not support the sales tax plan of Nichols.

Veteran Policeman Becomes Detective

The promotion of Policeman J. C. Broderick, who has been a private for 33 years, was announced yesterday by Maj. Ernest W. Brown, chief of poilce. He will be made a precinct detective.

Maj. Brown said Broderick will fill a vacancy left by the suspension of Detective Luther Wise, who was charged with extortion several days ago.

Broderick, Maj. Brown said, probably will be assigned to the Sixth Precinct, while Detective Charles Cannon, of the Sixth will go to the Tenth Precinct to take Wise's place.

been taken to foreign havens since the British and French evacuation program got under way last week, authorities said.

110 Children Evacuated.

(The latest refugee vessel to reach France was the British ship Marvia, which took 242 persons—110 of them children—to Pauillac today.)

Basque authorities pointed to the fact Madrid has held out for seven months against insurgent besiegers at its gates.

They declared a heavy shelling of insurgents north of Amorebieta, east of Bilbao on the Durango road, had slowed the advance of Mola's force and protected the operations of an army of 65,000 Basques and Asturians.

(The British freighter Sarastone, whose food cargo, destined for Bilbao, spoiled when she was delayed by officials of the international non-intervention committee, started back to England from Bordeaux, France. Authorities found only vegetables and some Belgian money in their search for contraband.)

Leftists Move on Toledo.

Madrid, May 11 (AP).—Madrid cleaned up again tonight after another insurgent shelling left some 40 dead and injured and piled new wreckage in the center of the city.

The bombardment came as government troops pressed on insurgent-held Toledo, 40 miles south of Madrid. The war ministry asserted the attackers were within a few miles of the city at one point.

(At Toledo—the site of the old Alcazar Military School from which an almost-starved insurgent garrison was rescued by a larger force last October—the insurgent command said 2,000 government soldiers had been killed or wounded in 11 unsuccessful attacks pointed toward the ancient city.

(Insurgent officers declared their men drove the government soldiers away in disorder after the last assault at 4 p. m. yesterday and followed them to their own trenches.)

Virginia Livestock Sales Rise in 1937

By the Associated Press.

The mounting importance of livestock and livestock products as a source of revenue for Virginia farmers was reflected in statistics published yesterday by the Bureau of Agricultural Economics.

The report showed that for the first three months of 1937, Virginia farmers received $9,550,000 from hte sale of livestock and livestock products, against $9,503,000 for principal farm crops. It marked the first time in four years for which figures were given that revenue from livestock exceeded total revenue from crops for the three months' period.

By comparison, in 1934 crop sales totaled $10,183,000 for the first three months of the year and livestock sales, $5,493,000.

Bob Burns Says

By Bob Burns.

I don't believe there's a country in the world where good sportsmanship is appreciated as much as it is over here.

I had one uncle, my Uncle Orie, who never amounted to very much because he was always gettin' into fights, but I always admired him because he had such a sense of honor and fair play. A big bully down home picked on Uncle Orie one time, and my uncle challenged the big man to a duel with pistols. The big man says, "That wouldn't be fair because I'm so much easier to hit than you are."

Uncle Orie says, "Well, you take a piece of chalk, and you mark my size on your body and if I hit outside the chalk mark, it don't count!"

Byrnes to Babcock.

E. Claude Babcock, president of the United Civil Service Employes, has received a letter from Senator James P. Byrnes, of South Carolina, and concerning it, Babcock says:

". . . I received a very disappointing letter from Senator Byrnes. After the Senator's radio speech of the other evening, I wrote him explaining that in many offices pay slashes by furloughs and unpaid overtime, as well as lay-offs, would result from the adoption of his proposal to cut all appropriations 10 per cent.

"I also requested his assurance that his amendment would 'include employe protection against a new pay slash by way of furloughs.' The pertinent part of the Senator's reply reads: 'As stated in that speech, I think that any amendment as to a reduction in the appropriations should be added to the last appropriation bill to be considered at this session, and at this time I have not drafted the language of the amendment I will offer.'

"It will be noted that this letter contains no assurance of employe protection against furloughs or lay-offs. It evades that question entirely. The United Civil Service Employes is addressing all members of Congress in order to try to obtain protection against a new pay slash by furlough, coupled with more unpaid overtime."

Promotion.

C. L. Forsling, director of the Appalachian Forest Experiment Station Asheville, N. C., has been appointed assistant chief forester in charge of all research activities of the Forest Service, Department of Agriculture, is announced by Chief Forester F. A. Silcox. Forsling comes to Washington Saturday to assume his new duties.

In the new post, he will supervise the work of the division of silvics, forest influences, range research, forest products and forest economics.

Forsling biography: He was born in Nebraska and was graduated from the university of that State. He specialized in forestry, botany and animal husbandry. He entered the Forest Service in 1915 and was assigned to the intermountain region. In 1917 he was transferred to the Jornado Experiment Station, in New Mexico, where he remained until July, 1922. Then he was sent to the Great Basin Experiment Station in Utah. In 1930 he was placed in charge of the Intermountain Forest and Range Experiment Station, at Ogden, Utah, and was transferred to the Appalachian Forest Experiment Station, in Asheville, in 1935.

Chief Forester Silcox says of him: "Mr. Forsling is recognized as one of the outstanding national authorities on the relation of forest and range vegetative cover to water run-off and erosion. During more than 20 years in the Forest Service he has shown marked ability and leadership in many lines of forestry work."

Interior's Museum.

The life story of Interior exhibits are now being prepared in the field laboratory at Fort Hunt and at the museum activities division of the National Park Service in the Ford Theater.

The museum will be designed to tell a running story through pictures, charts, maps, models and dioramas arranged in narrative sequence. There will be no cases of loosely organized, unco-ordinated displays of documents and scientific specimens or isolated heaps of dry bones and technical equipment. The museum will concern itself with means of illustrating ideas rather than in collections of specimens.

Especial attention has been given to the design of the exhibit cases . . . These will be constructed of dustproof aluminum frames contrasting effectively with monkscloth backgrounds and built into the wall with individual lighting. The case dimensions will be scientifically adjusted to the eye-level of visitors; the lighting throughout will be indirect to prevent eye-strain and the unpleasant reflection of light on the glass.

There will be special floor construction to lessen the usual museum walking fatigue. Air conditioning will serve the purpose of making the place bearable in summer and of preserving the exhibits.

Dr. Freeman Pays Tribute To Founders

Diocese of Washington Hears Annual Letter of Its Bishop.

That the founding fathers of the Republic and the makers of the Constitution were "moved by high motives and inspired by a holy trust in a divine power," was brought out last night by the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Episcopal Bishop of Washington, in his annual pastoral letter read before the opening session of the convention of the Diocese of Washington in Epiphany Church.

Tribute to these founders was further paid by Bishop Freeman when he declared: "The men who gathered in Philadelphia in May, 1787, to erect a mighty State—there was nought of self-seeking in their endeavors. Their great and commanding leader, Washington, stands among the world's supreme masters as a man of the highest Christian character, whose life and service to his country constitute one of the brightest pages in its history."

Continuing, Bishop Freeman pointed out that America has become less conscious of its dependence upon God in recent years. He urged his listeners to observe this year—the 150th anniversary of the signing of the Constitution—the real virtue in that great State paper.

Born in Righteousness.

In this regard he said: "That this Nation was born in righteousness, that prayer and a devout recognition of God's directing hand in all its concerns occupied the minds of the founding fathers, is clearly evident. The genius of statesmen combined with Christian faith to set this Nation on its way. We shall cheaply honor our Constitution if we fail to recognize this fact. We shall dishonor its high minded authors if we do not see in them and their incomparable service the aspirations and high aims of Christian men."

Bishop Freeman called attention to the approaching general convention of the Episcopal Church in the United States which will be held in Cincinnati, Ohio, next October. "These triennial gatherings furnish an opportunity for emphasizing the church's unity and solidarity," he said.

"This year, one of the vitally important matters for consideration has to do with the policy of the Church with reference to its national center, as the seat of the presiding bishop and the administrative offices. There is a growing conviction that Washington is the normal place for this center. It may be the part of wisdom for our own convention to consider what concessions it would be willing and ready to make if the general convention looks with favor upon this city as the logical place for its Federal seat of administration. Beyond an attitude of loyal obedience to the will of the general convention as representing the church in the Nation, we are not at present time called to go."

Gives Vigorous Warning.

Bishop Freeman gave vigorous warning that the Nation must not, for a temporary advantage "yield to nostrums compounded of schemes and purposes that can have no place in our individual and corporate life. America must cling to American ways and ideals and maintain its estate as Christian. If this be nationalism, so be it. He said:

"Civil and religious liberty are indissolubly bound together. When one goes, the other follows. If our America is to continue the land of the free, it must with zeal and ardour be the home of the brave. It is not because I falter at the claims of Christ, nor that I fear the defeat of His high and holy purposes and His ultimate triumph over the forces of evil that I thus speak, but rather because I fear that supineness or a compromise with His enemies, that I call you to remember that, 'Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty'."

Bishop Freeman paid tribute to the memory of three diocesan clergymen who have died since the last convention—the Rev. H. Orraine Tracy, the Rev. William Leverang De Vries, canon and precentor of Washington Cathedral, and the Rev. Frederick A. Cook, rector of the Old Church at Collington, Md., with its chapels at Bowie and Glendale. The bishop also spoke of the splendid services rendered to the diocese by the late Stephen E. Kramer.

Company L Marches Off Victorious: Its Captain Honored

H. P. Somerville Named to Head 'New Fidelity'

P. J. Schardt Is Secretary-Treasurer of Closed Bank's Successor.

Electing Harry P. Somerville, president, and P. J. Schardt secretary-treasurer, the board of directors of the new First Federal Savings and Loan Association, yesterday moved another step toward opening the institution which will succeed the closed Fidelity Building & Loan Association.

Walter M. Bastian, legal counsel for the new company which will take over the Fidelity's assets, said last night he expected the firm would be open for business in a month or so.

Beginning of operations must await completion of the asset survey being made by James Nolan, Fidelity receiver, and submission of his findings for court approval.

Somerville's status as managing director of the Willard Hotel will not be affected by his new responsibility nor will it be necessary for Schardt to give up his duties as assistant to the vice president of the Southern Railway, it was explained.

When the directors select a manager, Schardt will relinquish either the secretarial or treasurer's post, keeping one and turning the other over to the manager.

The directors have applied for membership of the association in the Federal Home Loan Bank System and for insurance of accounts up to $5,000 in the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation. Bastian said he expected the insurance application to be granted next Monday or Tuesday.

The Fidelity, with 18,000 depositors, closed last July.

Somerville has accepted the presidency of the successor institution as a civic duty and will serve without compensation, Bastian asserted. Managing director of the Willard since 1932, he has been active in civic affairs ever since coming to the Capital.

Policemen Crush Relief Sit-Down In Allen's Office

A relief workers' "sit-in" strike in Commissioner George E. Allen's office in the District Building was smashed by a squad of Washington police in less than two minutes yesterday afternoon.

In a brief, noisy melee, the nearly 40 reliefers, most of them women, were dragged from Allen's office, shoved into elevators and removed from the building. The affair was punctuated by the shrieks of protesting women and their frightened children.

No one was injured. No arrests were made.

The evacuation ended a protest sit-down of less than two hours. The group was led by Workers' Alliance Organizer David Dixon.

The aim of the demonstration, according to Dixon, was to protest the slash in relief funds for unemployables and to demand an appropriation for relief of employables.

Drive Opened For $2,000,000 By American U.

200 Hear Addresses by Dr. Christie, Dr. Gray and David Lawrence.

American University officially launched a campaign for $2,000,000 at a luncheon yesterday when Dr. A. C. Christie, chairman of the board, greeted 200 business, professional and civic leaders.

The $2,000,000, of which $250,000 is the quota set for the District of Columbia, will be used for the construction of buildings for the graduate school and the School of Public Affairs, dormitories, enlarged science equipment, and for the faculty endowment. The Washington money will be used for a men's dormitory on the undergraduate campus, new equipment and repairs, replacements and refurnishings.

Edward F. Colladay, president of the Washington Board of Trade and vice chairman of the board, urged the gathering to "help light the lamps of learning here in the Nation's Capital."

"We're in the midst of a boom," he said.

Dr. Joseph M. Gray, chancellor of the university, made an address.

David Lawrence, a member of the executive committee of the board, delivered a message from the board.

Drive to Raise $75,000 Begun By Boys' Clubs

The Metropolitan Police Boys' Clubs launched a drive for $75,000 with a committee luncheon yesterday at the Willard Hotel.

About 40 members of the initial gifts committee were present. Maj. Ernest W. Brown, police superintendent and founder of the clubs, presided. Speakers included Mrs. John Allan Dougherty, John Remon, William C. Shelton and R. F. Garrity.

C. L. Johnson, director of the campaign, outlined plans for the drive. They will include an initial solicitation by members of the special gifts committee and a final drive by policemen and club members.

The drive was given an auspicious start when four contributions of $200 each were announced at the luncheon. The money will go toward buying four new cabins for Camp Brown, where the club members are sent during the summer months.

Johnson explained that the $75,000 is needed to pay operating expenses for the four clubs, as well as for maintenance of the band, the musical and dental clinics and the camp. Of the $75,000, leaders expect to use $24,000 to start new branches of the clubs.

The second anniversary of the Fourth Precinct Police Boys' Club will be observed at the club tomorrow night.

Help of Kreml Asked as 4 Die In D.C.'s Traffic

Hazen Calls for Advice of Visiting Expert When Toll Rises Again.

By Howard F. Wentworth.

Alarmed at a new rise in Washington's traffic toll—with four fatalities within three days—Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen again appealed for driving caution yesterday and invited safety suggestions from Lieut. Franklin M. Kreml, Evanston traffic expert, who is to visit the city as guest of The Post.

Commissioner Hazen suggested that Lieut. Kreml remain in Washington long enough to study the problem and offer advice from his long experience in accident prevention work.

"We recognize Lieut. Kreml as an outstanding traffic authority," said Commissioner Hazen. "I hope he will remain to inspect our problem and give us the benefit of his suggestions."

Is Ranking Expert.

As ranking traffic expert of the country, Lieut. Kreml has established successful accident-prevention bureaus in more than a dozen major cities along the Eastern seaboard.

Since May 4, there have been four traffic fatalities in the District. Prior to that date, no one had been killed on Washington streets since April 20.

Hopes for a record safety period were shattered by the sudden rise in deaths. During the early part of last week, four pedestrians were killed—two of them by street cars.

"We were greatly encouraged by the apparent safety trend before these sudden deaths," said Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer. "Careless walking and negligence, our reports show, are responsible for the recent fatalities."

2,760 Injured in '37.

And during the first four months of this year, approximately 1,000 more persons were injured in Washington than during the same period in 1936. Thus far this year, 2,760 personal injuries have been reported as compared to 1,735 at the same time last year.

Lieut. Kreml, recent winner of the $5,000 C. I. T. safety award for "outstanding accomplishments" in traffic control during 1936, will be guest of honor tomorrow night at a dinner in the Willard Hotel. Sponsored by The Post, the dinner will be attended by city and Government officials interested in safety promotion.

In an effort to show what can be done in Washington, Lieut. Kreml will explain his accident prevention methods and outline his procedure for cutting death rates.

Fossils Studied At Smithsonian

From the so-called "Puerco and Terrejon horizons" in New Mexico specimens of more than 50 varieties were obtained last summer by Dr. Lewis Gazin, Smithsonian paleontologist.

These formations date back approximately 50,000,000 years to the time when present life forms began to make their appearance. These horizons represent the period when mammals first appear as dominant creatures on earth.

Western High's Company L Is Awarded Medal

Two thousand schoolboy cadets stood at attention on the field at Griffith Stadium at the dinner hour yesterday while Capt. Peyton Evans received for Company L of Western High School the first-place award in the annual competitive drill of Washington public high schools.

As Maj. Gen. Thomas Holcomb, commandant of the United States Marine Corps, the reviewing officer, pinned the first-place medal on Capt. Evans' uniform, adherents and students of Western learned that a drill unit of the school has been among the winners in the annual competition for the seventeenth consecutive year.

The second-place award went to Company A of Woodrow Wilson High School, captained by Erl I. Brent. Capt. Vincon T. Henderson, of Company A, Eastern High School, received the third-place medal.

The scores were 94.2 for Western, 92.5 for Woodrow Wilson, and 92.3 for Eastern.

More than 20,000 spectators were in the stands as the awards were made at the end of two days of steady drilling by company after company of high school marchers. The Western company, last on the field to drill, won first place in the competition.

All Western cadets shared in the honors won by Company L, as to the school went the silver cup for highest average company scores.

Company E of Wilson High School, led by Capt. Herzmark Safer, was judged the best of the February cadets, a classification devised for companies organized with the beginning of the second school term.

Rands, Labat Honored.

Two lads, who won medals they knew were coming to them, were Sergt. Robert Rands, of Company I, Roosevelt, and First Sergt. Stewart Labat, Company A, Central. They won first and second places, respectively, in the distinguished non-commissioned officers' competition Monday afternoon.

Last to step before Maj. Gen. Holcomb for awards were the officers of Roosevelt's Cadet Band, declared the best in the brigade. Sharing in the honor were Capt. Lawrence Rubards and Drum Major Don Collier.

Excitement gripped the crowd of high school youngsters as the brigade, 2,000 strong, began its march into the stadium for a mass formation before the reviewing officers, which included Maj. Gen. Holcomb, Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, president of the Board of Education; Col. Wallace M. Craigie, commandant of the cadet corps, and other school officers.

Meets Cadet Major.

Although wearied by two days of marching and maneuvering before exacting examiners, the uniformed youths strode briskly into the stadium.

Col. Craigie stepped forward to meet Cadet Maj. Charles Davis, brigade adjutant, whose duty it was to carry the winning name, which Col. Craigie was to hand him, to that company's captain.

With this name on a blue slip of paper held securely in his left hand, Maj. Davis marched down the center of the field. Then he paused for a ceremonial 10 seconds. If he faced right it would mean victory for Western, Roosevelt, or his own Woodrow Wilson—if left, it meant first place for Central, McKinley or Eastern.

Tension Can Be Eased.

The major heeled right—then marched to Western's regiment to inform Lieut. Col. John Cornwell of Company L's victory.

This procedure was followed in the awarding of each medal and cup.

While this ceremony was going on someone pointed out that cadet majors have been known to find a way to ease the tension of fellow cadets. An ever-so-slight motion of a hand, or nod, has been used to give schoolmates the "dope" in advance.

The winning companies passed before the cheering throng as they marched up for their awards. Then the entire brigade, led by their bands, passed before the reviewing officers.

Nurses Society Honors Mrs. Emory Scott Land

Mrs. Emory Scott Land was elected first vice president of the Instructive Visiting Nurse Society by a unanimous vote at the regular meeting of the board of directors yesterday at the headquarters office in the Albee Building.

Interior Bill Would Boost Pay of 2,000

Total of $135,180 a Yr. Is Approved for Low-Salaried Workers.

4 Educational, Welfare Institution Grants Follow Estimates.

Some 2,000 custodial employes of the Interior Department were allowed pay increases of $60 a year in the Interior supply bill reported to the House yesterday by the Appropriations Committee.

The pay raises, aggregating $135,180 a year, will go only to those workers who earn less than $1,200. The extra money was inserted in the bill at the request of Charles I. Stengle, of the American Federation of Government Employes, and Luther C. Steward, of the National Federation of Federal Employes.

Appropriations for the four Interior Department educational and welfare institutions in Washington were approximately as recommended by the Budget Bureau.

$1,149,750 for Hospital.

St. Elizabeths Hospital was allowed $1,149,750, which is $36,900 less than the 1937 appropriation but is the exact amount recommended in the budget report.

An additional $40,000 is provided for completion of a continuous-treatment building, for which $250,000 was appropriated last year. The bill also carries $290,000 for the construction of a second structure of the same type.

Howard University was allowed $700,000 by the committee. This is the amount recommended by the Budget Bureau and is $25,000 in excess of the current appropriation.

Vocational Grant.

Fredmen's Hospital is given $329,410 in the Interior bill, while the appropriation for the Columbia Institute for the Deaf is $145,000, with an additional $15,000 for improvements to the power, heating and light system.

An item of $15,000 for vocational education in the District is included in the bill.

For the operation, maintenance, and repair of public buildings in the District, under jurisdiction of the National Park Service, the measure provides $7,137,280.

Government employes who work at night would be paid 15 per cent more than those who labor in daylight hours under a bill introduced yesterday by Chairman Connery, of the House Labor Committee.

Officials Praised By Dr. Johnson

Appreciation of the life of the public official, as a function of the civic association, was the subject of an address last night by Dr. Mordecai W. Johnson, president of Howard University, before the Bloomingdale Civic Association, at a meeting in the auditorium of Tabor Presbyterian Church. Dr. Johnson was introduced by J. G. Logan, principal of Shaw Junior High School.

Outlining in detail seven classes of services performed by public servants, the speaker indicated ways by which that service might be made twice as efficient merely by the expression, through civic organization, of appreciation and understanding.

Van Sweringen Deal Declared Evasion of Law

Wheeler Charges Brothers Used Dummy Firms to Gain Road.

By the Associated Press.

Senator Wheeler (Democrat), Montana, charged yesterday the late Van Sweringen brothers had used a chain of dummy corporations to link the Chicago & Eastern Illinois Railroad into their vast transportation empire in defiance of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

The transaction was termed "a plain, ordinary evasion of the law" by Wheeler, chairman of the Senate Railway Finance Committee. He declared:

"If the Interstate Commerce Commission lets the railroads get away with this kind of deal we ought to have some new commissioners down there."

Herbert Fitzpatrick, chief lieutenant of the Van Sweringens and still a dominant figure in their 23,000-mile rail network, told the committee, after five hours of cross-examination, that "it is quite true we were doing indirectly what we could not do directly."

He quickly added, however, that "it was necessary to operate that way at the time," and asserted that the Cleveland railroad magnates eventually hoped to gain the Interstate Commerce Commission's approval of their acquisition.

The method by which the brothers gained control of the C. & E. I. was explained by Francis Paine, head of the Boston brokerage house which for years handled the Van Sweringen business.

The Chesapeake & Ohio paid him $5,000,000 on January 7, 1930, he testified, for an "option" on a block of stock controlling the Illinois carrier.

Although he did not then own this stock, he said, he purchased it that same day for $8,000,000 from the Thomas Fortune Ryan estate, using the Guaranty Co. and the Guaranty Trust Co., both of New York, as intermediaries.

William C. Potter, then president of Guaranty Trust, and Joseph R. Swan, then president of Guaranty Co., readily acknowledged they had served as the Van Sweringen representatives on the C. & E. I. board, passing their orders on to its president, Thomas C. Powell.

Potter added that "I got the impression" the brothers wanted their control of the line kept secret.

Wheeler then produced letters indicating that the Interstate Commerce Commission never learned of the transaction until two years later, and then only from newspaper reports.

Woman Juror Bill Pleases First Lady

New York, May 11 (AP).—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt would be glad to serve on a jury in her home State if it did not interfere with her White House duties.

She said today she was "perfectly delighted" at the passage of the women's jurors' bill by the Legislature last week and aded:

"I might not be able to serve while I was still in the White House, but even now if it could be arranged at the right time and if I were summoned, I should of course feel it my duty to serve.

"I think it is your job to serve on a jury if you're able. Of course, I don't mean that a mother of three children without household helpers should be expected to do it."

Auto Workers Threaten High Rent Sit Strike

Pontiac, Mich., May 11 (AP).—A sit-down strike against rent levels in Pontiac was threatened today by a committee of the United Automobile Workers of America.

In an advertisement in the Pontiac Daily Press the committee announced that unless rents are reduced by June 1, members of the union would cease paying landlords and "sit-down" in their rented houses.

Manslaughter Charged Against Auto Operator

Dowd C. Rozzelle, jr., of Alta Vista, Md., driver of the car in which George B. Gummell, of Chevy Chase, Md., was killed in a crash last week, was charged with manslaughter last night.

Maryland State Patrolman James H. Miller served the warrant. Rozzelle was released on bond to appear at a hearing in the county police court at Rockville on May 24.

Trade Board Sets Bake for Saturday

Approximately 1,000 members and guests of the Washington Board of Trade will convene for the forty-third annual shad bake Saturday at Bay Ridge, Md. According to Robert W. Davis, general committee chairman, there will not only be an abundance of shad, but also a diversified entertainment program.

There will be two dinners, 11:30 a. m. and 2:05 p. m., and a light lunch late in the afternoon, according to Diller B. Groff, chairman of the dinner committee. Entertainment, arranged by a committee headed by Chris Heurich, jr., includes swimming, baseball games, boxing matches, wandering minstrels and a floor show.

Gov. Harry W. Nice of Maryland, Rear Admiral D. F. Sellers, Senator William H. King, Senator J. Hamilton Lewis, Representative V. L. Helvering, commissioner of internal revenue, are among those who have been invited.

Officials Are Quiet On Money Parley

By the Associated Press.

Administration officials, in the absence of a public expression by President Roosevelt, were noncommittal last night toward a proposal by Representative Dies (Democrat), Texas, for an international monetary conference.

Some members of Congress reported they had heard that the President might discuss the possibility of such a conference on his return to the Capital Friday.

Leaders made no flat prediction that he would reveal his views, however, and Treasury officials commented that the existing monetary agreement between the United States, Great Britain and France is working satisfactorily.

In discussions of Dies' proposal, it was recalled that the Administration has shown concern for months over the large volume of gold entering the United States.

Mrs. Eva Bumstead, 60, Red Cross Worker, Dies

Phoenix, Ariz., May 11 (AP).—Mrs. Eva Regina Bumstead, 60, naturalist, world traveler and big game hunter, died today. She was the wife of Col Dale Bumstead, retired Army officer.

During the World War she was personnel officer for the Potomac Division of the American Red Cross, with headquarters in Washington. She was a native of Bath, Me., and came to Phoenix in 1922 from Oak Park, Ill.

'Red Eye' Aids Leftists' Attacks Before Bilbao

Guernica, Spain, May 11 (U.P.).—Loyaltis militia pass around a jug of cognac called "parapet jump" before they go "over the top," prisoners taken by the rebels said tonight.

One prisoner was captured when he fell asleep. He blamed the "parapet jump."

Soviet Shifts Army Leaders, Secret Police

Shakeup Called Result of Recent Treason Proceedings.

By the Associated Press.

Moscow, May 11.—The most important shake-up in the Red army command since Leon Trotzky was removed from the war commissariat in 1923 today demoted Marshal Michail Nikolaevich Tukhachevsky from his post as second in command of Soviet military forces.

A curt communique announced the first vice commissar of war had been shifted to the command of the Volga military garrison, a position of minor importance.

Officials declined to discuss the order, but the marshal's position had been considered dubious since January, when the newspaper writer, Karl Radek, on trial with 16 others as Trotzkyist plotters, brought his name into the proceedings.

Kremlin Tightens Up.

Tukhachevsky's removal was accompanied by other significant shifts and an administrative order apparently designed to enhance the Kremlin's influence in army ranks through organizers.

Tukhachevsky's post was filled by the chief of the general staff, A. I. Yegoroff, and Commander B. M. Shaposhnikoff, chief of the Leningrad garrison, was appointed to succeed Yegoroff. Commander I. E. Yakir was named to the Leningrad post, leaving vacant temporarily his important position in the Ukraine garrison.

Some observers expressed belief that Tukhachevsky's demotion may be the first step toward dismissal from the army. Similar tactics were followed when Genrikh G. Yagoda, long-time head of the OGPU (secret police), was shifted to a minor post and later arrested.

There was doubt in informed circles, however, that Tukhachevsky would be arrested.

Held in Russia.

Tukhachevsky cropped up in the treason trial when Radek, who later received a ten-year prison sentence, said Gen. Vitokva K. Putna was sent to him by Tukhachevsky to test some materials.

Tukhachevsky, known as a picturesque and able fighter, was the first important Czarist officer to join the bolshevik revolution. He served as the army's diplomatic representative, both at the funeral of British King George V and during Franco-Sovet negotiations in Paris.

He had been designated as a delegate to the coronation of George VI, but the Soviet representative was changed last week.

Francis Mitchell Dies.

New York, May 11 (AP).—Francis J. R. Mitchell, 65, of New York, member of the War Trade Board at Washington in 1918 and former president of the Banco Nationale of the Republic of Santo Domingo, died today. Mr. Mitchell was a former national president of Phi Delta Theta Fraternity.

Hitler Brought On Culture Collapse, Sirovich Declares

Representative William I. Sirovich, New York City, told the House Monday German knowledge and culture has collapsed under the "autocratic rule of that fanatical paranoic, Adolf Hitler."

Assailing Hitler's drive against the churches, Sirovich said "at least, we must give credit to that other dictator, Mussolini. He has at all times been the defender of Christianity. He has permitted other religions to worship God in their own way."

He described Hitler as the modern counterpart of Mani, who warred on Christianity in the fourth century.

"Christianity," Sirovich said, "must crush the Nazi paganism of Hitler just as it destroyed the paganism of Mani."

Hermann Ensslin Funeral Is Today

Funeral services for Hermann E. Ensslin, 70, of 302 Upshur street, veteran retired Army post commissary sergeant, who died Monday in Walter Reed Hospital, will be held this noon at 12:30 at Hines' undertaking establishment. Burial will follow in Arlington Cemetery.

Mr. Ensslin served in Indian wars in the West, and was with the cavalry which backed up the Roosevelt Rough Riders in their charge on San Juan Hill in the Spanish-American War. Later he saw service in the Philippines and on the Mexican border. He retired in 1912, coming to Washington to live.

A native of Germany, he came to this country when he was 16 years old. He was a member of Washington Centennial Lodge of Masons and Centennial Chapter of the Order of the Eastern Star. He also was a member of a chapter of Royal Arch Masons at New London, Conn., and Henry W. Lawton Chapter, United Spanish War Veterans.

Survivors include his wife, Mrs. Mary Etta Ensslin; a son, Robert R. Ensslin, and a grandson, both of Youngstown, Ohio.

SEC Test Hangs On Subway Sale In Buenos Aires

By the Associated Press.

An international financier's refusal to disclose the final disposition of $250,000 he received for negotiating the sale of a subway system in Buenos Aires may result in a test of the Securities Commission's power to compel testimony under the public utility holding company act.

David Schenker, counsel for the commission, recommended yesterday that it ask the Justice Department to file a complaint under the act against Philip DeRonde, the financier, who also is the Paraguayan consul in New York.

At a commission hearing Friday into the affairs of the General Investment Corporation, DeRonde refused to reveal the final disposition of his $250,000 fee from the investmen trust for negotiating the sale of the subway in the Argentine capital. The subway, into which General Investment had put $17,500,000, was sold to a semi-official agency of the Argentine government for $7,500,000, testimony indicated.

Commissioner Healy granted DeRonde three days in which to consult an attorney. After DeRonde failed to appear at the time set by the commissioner, Schenker said today he would request that the commission's record in the case be submitted to the Justice Department for action.

State Department officials said DeRonde had been Paraguayan consul in New York City since 1917, but that he does not have diplomatic immunity.

Before he refused to reveal final disposition of his $250,000 fee in the subway sale, DeRonde told the Securities Commission he had received payment by a check for $100,000, plus 150 $1,000 bills.

He declared he had not personally retained a dollar of the money, but had turned the entire fee over to Philip DeRonde, Ltd., a Nassau corporation of which he was president but not a stockholder.

When Schenker asked the names of the corporation's stockholders, DeRonde declined to disclose them, asserting they were "Argentines, Paraguayans and English gentlemen, friends of mine, doing business outside the United States."

Chef Dies Who Taught Cooking to New Queen

London, May 11 (U.P.).—Nicholas Soyer, 74, famous chef who taught Queen Elizabeth to cook during her childhood at Glamis Castle, in Scotland, and was traveling chef for Edward VIII and George V, died Tuesday at Lytham.

His grandfather accompanied Florence Nightingale to the Crimea, insisting on becoming a member of her nursing staff because he was "a nurse of the stomach."

City Hospitals Hold Open House For D. C. Visitors

Washingtonians will be provided with an opportunity to familiarize themselves with city hospitals today as the 34 hospitals, clinics and dispensaries in the city observe National Hospital Day.

In each of these institutions authorities will hold open house and visitors will be permitted to go through the wards and the kitchens and all sections of the institutions.

In most cases the doors will be thrown open to visitors after 2 o'clock in the afternoon. Groups of school children are scheduled to visit several institutions, where they will be shown hospital equipment.

In the majority of cases the women's boards of the various hospitals will act as hostesses for the guests.

Dr. Nolan Lauds D. C. Social Work

Private social work agencies yesterday were given credit for a large percentage of crime prevention work in Washington by Dr. James Allen Nolan, executive director of the Washington Criminal Justice Association. Speaking before the Federal Community Chest forum, Dr. Nolan reviewed briefly some of the points brought out in the recent first annual report of the association.

He referred to the small number of convictions in connection with the number of crimes committed and declared that any program of law enforcement must be sustained by the whole city if it is to be effective.

Dr. Nolan declared that youth must be guided into a life of good behavior. People, he said, must learn to behave in groups and while many homes are failing to give children the proper outlook we have, on the other hand, the family agencies such as the Catholic Charities, Salvation Army, Family Service Association and Jewish Social Service, which aid families in getting back the proper home atmosphere.

Isle of Wight Woman First Among Standees

London, May 11 (U.P.).—A woman from Freshwater Bay, Isle of Wight, who said she was "Mrs. Heggs," claimed honors as first arrival on the coronation procession route. With a heavy rain pelting down, she opened an umbrella and settled down on a sand bin in Whitehall at 10 a. m.—25 hours before the show. "I'm doing this just because I'm patriotic," she said. "I sat up 24 hours to watch George V's silver jubilee procession."

'Common Life' Training Urged By Youth Body

Society Is Responsible for Child Until Working Age, Group Says.

The American Youth Commission decided yesterday that society has "an increasing responsibility for the education, welfare and development of young people" until they get old enough to go to work.

The commission reached this conclusion after deliberating in executive session at the Chamber of Commerce Building and adopting some principles on the care and education of youth.

As the basis for a formal educational program, the commission urged "an education for the common life." Such an education it declared, would be "adapted to the varying abilities and aptitudes of youth" but would have "a core of common materials for all."

It was emphasized in the discussion that children should receive formal education until they are at least 16. After that, the commission considers, society can meet its responsibility through "less formal and more flexible means."

Among members of the commission at the meeting were Chairman Newton D. Baker, Vice Chairman Owen D. Young, Dr. Miriam V. Waters, secretary; Will W. Alexander, of the Resettlement Administration; Ralph Budd, of Chicago; Dorothy Canfield Fisher, of Arlington, Va.; Dr. Willard E. Givens, secretary of the National Education Association; Henry I. Harriman, former president of the United States Chamber of Commerce; Dr. Robert M. Hutchins, president of the University of Chicago; the Rev. George Johnson, secretary of the National Catholic Education Association; Chester H. Rowell, editor of the San Francisco Chronicle; Dr. William F. Russell, dean of Columbia University Teachers' College; Dr. John W. Studebaker, United States Commissioner of Education; Matthew Woll, vice president of the American Federation of Labor.

4 'Flying Fortresses' To Circle Washington

Four of the Army's giant, four-engined Boeing bombers, the "flying fortresses," will circle Washington at 6:45 tomorrow morning on a 1,855-mile non-stop flight from Langley Field, Va., to New England and return.

The planes will leave Langley Field at 6 a. m. fly north to Augusta, Me., circle Syracuse, N. Y., Cleveland, Ohio and other cities, and return to Langley at 4:38 p. m. According to the Associated Press, officers said the flight was intended to provide further tests for the planes, to give additional training for the personnel and to give the public an opportunity to see the ships.

Treasury Aides Begin Study of Revenue Laws

on undistributed corporation profits; the imposition of taxes on income derived here by foreigners from security transactions; tightening up generally of administrative provisions and the feasibility of lowering personal exemptions and thus expanding the base of income taxpayers.

The latter proposal has been projected as a means of increasing Federal revenue should that step appear necessary when the Treasury is ready to report to Congress next winter. At present married taxpayers are allowed an exemption of $2,500 annually and single taxpayers $1,000. Proposals frequently have been made for reducing these exemptions to $1,500 and $500, respectively. This not only would bring several million more wage-earners under the Federal income tax, but it would increase the sum paid by all taxpayers without any change in rates.

Revenue Below Estimate.

Unless the current movement on Capitol Hill for economy is successful in a marked degree, it appears the Treasury will have to seek means of increasing revenue to get a balanced budget. The present income tax rates did not produce as much revenue in March as the Treasury's statisticians estimated.

Thus the deficit for the current year is now estimated at $2,557,000,000 (excluding debt retirement) or $309,000,000 more than Mr. Roosevelt estimated last January. On that occasion the President promised a balanced budget for the next fiscal year, but due to the failure of income tax collections to meet anticipations a defieit of $418,000,000 (exclusive of debt retirement) is now estimated for that period.

Tightening of income tax administration, however, will not wait on the conclusions of the Magill study. Suggestions for increasing the efficiency of collections will be laid before the 37 internal revenue agents in charge. In addition to their consultations with Secretary Magill, they will be addressed by Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., Internal Revenue Commissioner Guy T. Helvering and Deputy Commissioner Charles T. Russell.

The internal revenue agents in charge have supervision over the field agents in their respective districts. These are the officers who make field examinations of income tax returns. They are nearing the completion of a check of the 1935 returns and about July 1 will start on returns for the last calendar year. In the last fiscal year, Helvering asserted, these agents discovered additional revenue available for collection totaling $222,039,314.

Personnel of Group.

Those representing the Board of Tax Appeals named to the committee to formulate recommendations for expediting the work of that agency were Logan Morris, J. Edgar Murdock and C. Rogers Arundell. They will work with Russell Ryan, P. C. Alexander and Stanley Surrey, of the chief counsel's staff. Morris will serve as chairman of the committee and Surrey as secretary.

Magill, who has specialized in Federal tax laws for a number of years, was one of the experts which the Treasury in 1934 sent to England to make a comparative study of the British taxation system. In a report this committee stressed the need for a restatement of the American revenue laws in the interest of clarity and simplification and a simplification and decentralization of administration.

This group on their return from England pointed out that "it will probably be found that greater simplicity and equity could be obtained in some instances, and more regard given to economic conditions, if the existing law were changed."

They also recommended for consideration the following major questions of changes in the substantive law:

"1. Should we depend more on a general (instead of detailed) statement of a statutory rule, coupled with a delegation of discretionary power to the tax administration to make the detailed application?

"2. Should we eliminate the taxation of capital gains and the deduction of capital losses, in order to secure a more stable revenue and to avoid many complex questions in connection with valuations and reorganizations?

"3. Should we, as a corollary to 2, limit the deductions for depreciation and depletion as has been done in England?

"4. Should we collect more revenue at the source, especialy in the case of income going out of the country?

"5. Should we revise our provisions relating to interest, penalties and filing of returns?"

All these questions will receive consideration in the Magill study.

Secretary 'Stolen' By Roosevelt's Son

Boston, May 11 (AP).—A Boston insurance executive last night bemoaned, even with a smile, that he allowed his secretary, Miss Katherine Gilligan, 26, to report a political address of James Roosevelt, the President's son, in the national campaign last year.

Today Roosevelt announced he had engaged Miss Gilligan as his secretary in Washington. Roosevelt is serving as one of his father's secretaries. Miss Gilligan is a graduate of a Boston secretarial school.

"Cafe Metropole" Brings Gregory Ratoff to Fore Both as a Clever Writer and a Skillful Comedian

Author-Actor Plays Leading Comedy Role in Whimsical Romance, Coming to the Screen at Loew's Capitol, With Loretta Young, Tyrone Power and Adolphe Menjou in Support; Pete Smith Goes in for Culinary Delights; "Wings of the Morning" a Remake From 1919; Current Theater Notes.

THIS Gregory Ratoff is quite a fellow.

Married to Eugenie Leontovich, a graduate of the Moscow Art Theater, who played the role of the dancer in the stage version of "Grand Hotel"—played on the screen in that fabulous Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer all-star cast by Greta Garbo—Ratoff himself has enriched the screen with a long list of character impersonations of the first rank. It might be recalled that he did a particularly effective piece of work with Ronald Colman in the screen version of Ouida's "Under Two Flags;" that he was incomparable as the aged cabby in the recent remake of "Seventh Heaven"—a role of which he might never have been suspected, even by his most ardent admirers—and as the "comic relief" in a large number of other films of the first rank.

BELL.

This all leads up to the fact that Ratoff has done an especially fine job as author of the original story of "Cafe Metropole," which was previewed by the drama desks in the private projection room of the Twentieth Century-Fox Film Exchange yesterday afternoon. Not only did he do a nice piece of writing in fabricating this whimsical tale, but he also does an excellent bit of characterization in the role of the bona fide Russian nobleman in the story. A great deal of the comedy of the play depends upon the dialectic ability of its author. He has a faculty for twisting the King's English almost to the point of distortion attained by Herman Bing. Beyond that, there is nothing that can be done to dislocate syllables and disrupt authentic pronunciations.

It is a merry and exceedingly fantastic fable that Mr. Ratoff has written in "Cafe Metropole." If called upon—as I shall not be—to catalogue it, I should say that it belongs in the same bracket with "The King and the Chorus Girl." It dares the same defiance of logic, the same indifference to realistic portraiture and the same carefree oblivion to actuality as the earlier production that introduced Fernand Gravet to the American screen.

Despite all this fanciful incursion into the field of comic imagination, the story holds an undeniable charm and a brisk and engaging tempo. No one ever will be bored looking at it or listening to its lines and background music. I say "background music" because "Cafe Metropole" is not a "musical" in the usual sense. It is straight romantic comedy, played with a skill that may be estimated by any seasoned theatergoer from a mere recital of those appearing in the principal roles. These include Loretta Young and Tyrone Power, whose likenesses appear on this page today—I hope—Adolphe Menjou, in one of his most suave and persuasive impersonations; the aforementioned Gregory Ratoff, Charles Winninger, Helen Westley, Ferdinand Gottschalk, Christian Rub, Georges Renavent, Albert Conti, in a mere "bit;" Armand Kaliz, in another; Paul Porcasi, Marcelle Corday, Andre Beranger and a long list of others.

There will be a complete review of this gay subject on these pages on Saturday, but, in the meantime, it may not be too much of an imposition to suggest that here is a pretty elegant trifle that ought not to be overlooked by the judicious show-shopper. It is a lot of inconsequential fun—if you deem fun inconsequential.

• • • •

Preceding yesterday's preview of the major feature, there was shown one of those enlivening Pete Smith short-reels in which the art of cookery was celebrated until it made your mouth water—or maybe it was my mouth. At any rate, it was an amusing thing in which it was demonstrated in what short order a complete dinner might be prepared by modern oven methods. One suspects that the production costs may have been paid by the manufacturers of electric stoves. So what? So it still is an interesting exposition of the means of appeasing the gnawing gastronomical demands of those who think they are going to get nothing to eat when they get home in the evenings—except out of cans.

• • • •

So now it comes out. When I viewed "Wings of the Morning" in the Warner projection room a week ago, there seemed something strangely reminiscent and nostalgic about the Epsom Downs race scenes. Somewhere, I was sure, I had seen all of that business before, but, more or less naturally, I laid the blame on the newsreels.

Then Jerry Gross, the student of the theater who pinch-hits for this department during vacation periods—if any—suggested that he had seen William Farnum in the same story back about 1920 or 1921. So we did a little research work. Sure enough, there it was.

"Wings of the Morning," the fine natural-color film now being shown on the screen at the Earle, first was made by Fox in 1919—Jerry missed the date by a couple of years—and, of course, at that time was done as a black-and-white, silent picture. Farnum at that time was at the top of his form, earning something like $10,000 a week—the same salary that the same company later paid Tom Mix.

Not strange that both of us should have had a vague memory of the earlier production. It was as proportionately important back in 1919 as it is today, done in both sound and color.

Supposed to have been born in New Orleans, the Preisser Sisters, June and Cherry, appearing in the "Follies," at the National this week, just as they have on numerous other Washington stages during the past several years, are more or less at home in the National Capital.

It seems that they are making their home during the current engagement with H. Warren Preisser, 1809 Monroe street, a member of the mechanical staff of a local newspaper. Home folks.

Contract Bridge

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson.

Locating Vital Honors.

For nearly ten years after contract took this country by storm, novices, average players and experts alike wrestled with the bogey of unbiddable slams. It was almost immediately apparent that a large proportion of slams that were actually made in the play, but which could not be reached in the bidding, owed their success or failure to the presence of an unbiddable queen, singleton or blank suit in either hand. To diagnose the trouble was not to discover the remedy, and it was not until about a year ago, when asking bids were presented, that this problem was intelligently attacked. It is not claimed that asking bid results are absolute perfection where slam bidding is concerned; indeed, it is doubtful that such an exalted status will ever be attained. It is claimed, however, and the claim has been proved by time, that asking bids do reduce the hazards of slam bidding by an enormous percentage.

South, dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

	♠ A Q 9 5 ♡ — ◇ A 9 8 4 3 ♣ 10 7 6 5
♠ 7 4 3 ♡ 9 6 2 ◇ K Q J 6 5 ♣ J 4	North West East South	♠ 8 ♡ K J 10 5 3 ◇ 10 7 2 ♣ 9 8 3 2
	♠ K J 10 6 2 ♡ A Q 8 7 4 ◇ — ♣ A K Q

This hand was played in a recent team-of-four match. In one room, where North and South were using no slam conventions, the bidding went as follows:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	3 ♠	Pass
4 ♡	Pass	5 ◇	Pass
6 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

The diamond bid was by no means encouraging to South, who had quite different worries on his mind. Even assuming that North had four spades to the ace for his double jump, there was grave danger that the spade queen was off the hand that a heart trick might be lost.

In the other room, North-South were using the latest slam aids of the Culbertson system, and the bidding went as follows:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	3 ♠	Pass
4 ♡	Pass	4 N T	Pass
5 N T	Pass	7 ♠	Pass
Pass	Pass

South's four heart asking bid having located second-round heart control and two outside aces (as a matter of fact, of course North had first found heart control but was unable to show it at this stage), South's only worry remained the queen of trumps. The five no-trump grand slam force, which demands that partner bid seven if he holds two of the three top honors in the agreed suit, solved this dimculty to perfection.

Declarer had no difficulty in ruffing three hearts and discarding the remaining heart loser on the diamond ace, while maintaining rigid control of the trump suit. It should be noted, however, that without the queen of spades in the North hand the grand slam would be a very dangerous undertaking.

Romantic Interest in New Comedy

Tyrone Power, remembered for his splendid work as the adult star of "Lloyds of London," and Loretta Young, remembered for so many agreeable performances that not all of them can be recalled, as they appear in the new Twentieth Century-Fox production of "Cafe Metropole." This will be the chief feature of the screen program at Loew's Capitol Theater for the week beginning Friday and is recommended as a diverting light entertainment.

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDLER

Hollywood, May 11.—Driving to work today, I had to twist my wheels sharply to keep from crashing into a woman motorist who failed to signal a turn. That set me to thinking about women drivers, and about how few actresses motor their own. Mulling over this, I wondered whether they are just too lazy, or too preoccupied. I believe the correct answer is simply that they do not want to.

NORMA SHEARER.

• • • •

Greta Garbo has no knowledge of handling a car. When she was required to start one in a movie scene, the machine was towed. Marlene Dietrich has no driver's license, nor has Mae West. I cannot recall seeing, nor can I immediately find anyone who has seen Norma Shearer, Mary Brian, Miriam Hopkins, Loretta Young or Edna Mae Oliver in the driver's seat.

• • • •

Most foreign stars frankly admit fear of American traffic. This is especially true of those who come from countries where traffic lanes are reversed; that is, where cars keep to the left of highways.

Too, there is the matter of accidents. A star in a slight collision is marked as easy prey for a big damage suit. That is why wealthy actresses prefer experts at their wheels. Another angle is that the average New York actress has never owned a car; she knows more about taxi meters than she does about clutch pedals, and more about subways than about changing tires.

• • • •

But whatever the cause, the more I think of this morning's woman motorist who made me flirt with a telephone pole because she failed to signal, the more I admire actresses who leave motoring to chauffeurs.

• • • •

Instead of collecting autographs, some of the stars are having themselves a hilarious time collecting "doodles." Doodles, in case you do not know (I didn't) are the meandering figures, diagrams, circles, and whatnots the average person draws while he is talking on a telephone.

Each particular doodle, so I am informed, means something to doodle "experts." (Silly as it sounds, there are people who set themselves up as experts and presumably read character from these knick-knacks of pencilmanship.)

• • • •

Chatting with Anita Louise the other day, I was absently drawing my favorite figures (rows and rows of lines), when she suddenly grabbed the paper and crammed it in her handbag. It seems Anita is a collector of doodles. And today she telephoned to tell me that experts say my particular scribbling indicates a well-balanced mind. Can you blame me for laughing when they call "doodle character readers" experts?

• • • •

This really happened, although I will admit it reads like a wild man's dream. That is why I have written this explanatory forenote about its being true.

The scene called for a hundred hungry horsemen to dismount and crowd around a barbecued steer. With their bare hands they were to tear off the meat and eat ravenously. Ordinarily not much of a trick, but the first take of the scene was spoiled because a foreground extra regarding his portion with disfavor. At which the director stopped the cameras and lit into the poor guy. At last the extra confessed, "I'm a vegetarian."

New York, May 11.

". . . so how will I spend my time now that I've given up my job? Go ahead—think of something. I guess I'll take in typewriting . . . What, dear? . . . Some one swiped a $2 bill from your wallet? . . . Well, I took that $2 bill . . . See I'm not superstitious?"

• • • •

12 P. M. "M.-G.-M. had three cameramen at Churchill Downs," a film official confides at "21." "They photographed the Kentucky Derby to use the shots for the new Gable-Harlow-Barrymore picture. And the name of the film for which the derby scenes will be used is—'Saratoga'" . . . "Well, I signed my picture contract," Ernest Truex informs. "I've got a role in the Gary Cooper picture, 'Marco Polo'" . . . Gwynne Pickford watches Mary Pickford dancing with Phillips Holmes at LeMirage. "I don't know where people get the idea Mary's a quiet homebody," she sighs. "Wera Engels and I were worn out trying to keep up with her on board ship" . . . At the Tavern Mrs. George S. Kaufman urges a noted theatrical figure to accept the movie offers being tendered him. "Listen, and take my advice," she urges. "Don't overlook the money part of it. I've been poor and I've been rich. Rich is better!"

• • • •

1 A. M. "Henry Wilcoxson's wife packed all his clothes—including his pants—while he was bathing," a socialite reveals at Mori's. "So Henry had to borrow a pair of pants from the hotel porter to get to the ship!" . . . "Jane Pickens and I were official timers for the waiters' race up Lexington avenue," Fay Marbe informs. "But we got so excited we forgot to press the stop-watches" . . . "They're still using Ronnie Gedeon's photos as illustrations," Tommy Lyman relates at The Oaks. "The June edition of 'Secrets' carries several poses of her—but with no mention of her name, of course."

• • • •

2 A. M. "So much for rumor," Helen Vinson defies at the Stork Club—and rises to dance with her husband, Fred Perry . . . "Only once did I deviate from my blue suit, white shirt and black bow-tie," George White explains. "I wore a gray suit and my doorman at the Apollo wouldn't let me in. He didn't recognize me!"

• • • •

3 A. M. "Sir Cedric Hardwick was the last British officer to leave the World War zone," John Halliday explains at the Plaza's Persian Room. "So he was invited to West Point last week to lecture on the theater" . . . at the Harlem Uproar House Jay Faggen laments: "No foresight. I advertise this place as Broadway's hottest cafe, and now I'll have to change that—what with my new cooling system here" . . . "I was New Zealand's middleweight champ for seven years," John G. O'Connell tells Barbara Bement at the Rainbow Room, "so Gene Tunney has invited me to the country to visit him."

• • • •

4 A. M. At Barney Gallant's, Rear Admiral Yates Stirling, jr., discusses his new job as set-designer for Dorothy Stone's show, "Sea Legs." "There's no fundamental difference between the theater and the Navy," he contends. "The Navy just puts on a better show, that's all" . . . "Check up on this," a politician whispers at the Versailles, "but you can be sure—Jack Dempsey will try to pull out of his restaurant deal."

• • • •

5 A. M. "Well, add another to my comeback-list," Proprietor Bill Hardey elates at the Gay Nineties. "I've just arranged a radio audition for Eddie Leonard" . . . "The cruelest cut of all came after my last broadcast," Ed Wynn sighs. "I've made and lost three fortunes in the theater. So a girl in the studio audience comes up and asks: 'Mr. Wynn, what did you do before radio?'" . . . "Norman Anthony is plotting a take-off on Noel Coward's 'Present Indicative,'" a publisher confides at the Yumuri. "It'll be entitled, 'Future Indefinite'" . . . "Guess I'll rough it tomorrow," Tommy Manville tells Joe Lewis at The Frolics—"by not having breakfast in bed" . . . At the Bird's Cage, at 7th and 48th, where a sandwich man is attired as Charlie Chaplin, another come-on is placed in the window—a piece of seared girder, with a sign: "Part of Framework of the Dirigible Hindenburg."

• • • •

6 A. M. "No, dear, I haven't been to bed yet . . . Well, I've been busy writing these invitations . . . Oh, didn't you know? We're tendering a house-cooling party tomorrow. No, not house-warming. I said house-cooling. It's a party we're going to give here—in honor of our moving out!"

Troika Artists Making Plans For Vacations

Helen Forrest, Who Sings at Madrillon, Receives Band Offer.

By Chanticleer

Comes now the time when some of the better spots for winter evening diversion close up their pianos and big cook stoves and the stars of the floor shows plan their vacations even as you and I. At the Russian Troika, for example, parting is a sad affair at best. For here the Mischas and Yaschas and Toschas have been together backstage and on the floor before the Washingtonians they soon learn to know for months.

Mischa Markoff, the Troika's master of ceremonies, hies off to Canada, where he will present summer shows in one of the spots across the border. George, the headwaiter, merely moves to one of the local nighteries to combine work with a vacation.

But then—the winter opening at the Troika is always the bright spot of the season and without a summer close there would be no fall opening, so?

There's that old proverb about the prophet in his own town, and Helen Forrest, although no seeress, is nevertheless in the same category. Helen, who now is a singing star of Peter Borras' Madrillon, comes from New York. She sang there for months but decided that to get real recognition in Manhattan it would be better to go elsewhere, begin over and come in as a non-Gothamite! Then along comes Artie Shaw and his orchestra (Capitol Theater) and Maestro Shaw offers Helen a contract to work with his band. So you see—the plan worked beautifully. Helen hasn't said yes as yet.

These cool, late spring evenings are great for business down at Brinkley's, the rendezvous Southeast. Jimmy Crandall says he's so busy that the impromptu singing has had to be ended for the time being. But there'll be more later.

Jack Campbell and Leo Lisee are accustomed to receiving requests from the Mayfair customers by the bushel basket full—but now they're beginning to come in the mail. This team estimates that every conceivable type of tune has been requested in the last winter. Every request is played even though the boys have to dig in and do a lot of research.

Coronation night is to be a very special event at the Raleigh's Pall Mall Room. The famous Pall Mall (street) in London, for which the room is named, is one thoroughfare the procession will traverse and so the whole event takes on special significance at the Pennsylvania avenue establishment. British flags will adorn the walls; a special dinner is offered at $2, with no extra charges for the entire evening. And a program of British tunes.

The press notices all said Beta Ray current dance attraction at the Shoreham, is a "girl after your own heart" and after seeing Betta you just don't mind if she is after your heart. She's been playing the London Palladium, incidentally. Also on the floor at the Shoreham—Carl Simpson's Marionettes.

What a reunion at Wardman Park last week when Maestro Arthur Warren was host to Shep Fields and Mal Hallett, two visiting firemen maestri of the first water. Mal was playing a dance at the Wardman Friday night and Arthur would sneak off at times to listen in to his friend and colleague.

La Paree is breaking away from the usual this week to present a group of stars under the heading of "The Sophisticated Nine." A clever set of twins, the Freeman Sisters, befuddle you completely, not only looking alike but matching each other's high kicks. They've just recently returned from a tour of Argentina. "Suicide On Wheels" is the title of the act of Stephen and Myra—with the aid of roller skates. Mills, Stone and Wald are held over with their acrobatic and dance characteristic.

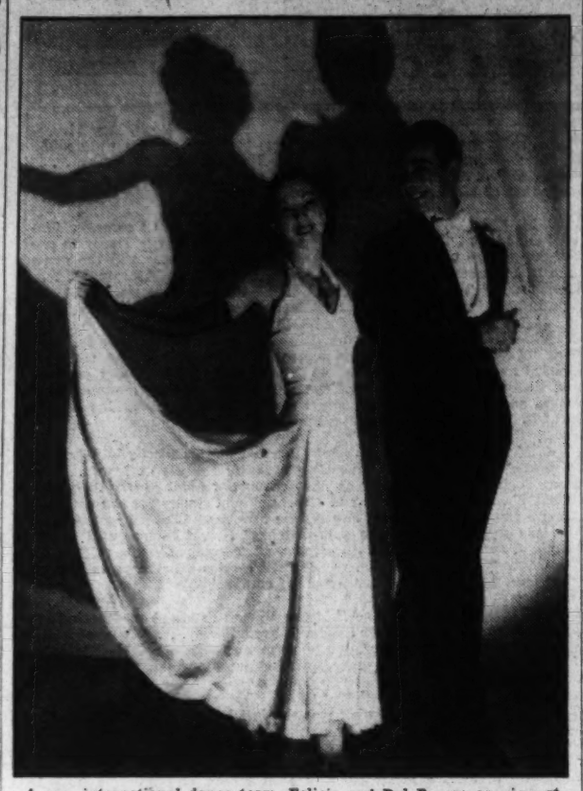
A new international dance team is on view at the Lotus this week—Felicia and Rel Re—introducing something different in the way of a musical comedy fox trot and an interpretation of the "slums of Paris." Peter and Peggy Mathews do a very tricky table dance and their own version of "Barnacle Bill, the Sailor." Betty and Babs are featured in a fast buck and wing and the Earl Lindsay Girls lend plenty of charm and atmosphere. Bill Strickland and his orchestra for your dancing and Evelyn Knight sings the lyrics.

Lotus Dance Team—and Maestro



A new international dance team, Felicia and Del Re are on view at the Lotus this week. High light is their interpretation in dance of "the slums of Paris." Below: Ted Black, who brings his orchestra to Washington for night playing on the steamer Potomac.

Lenore Ulric Recovering.

New York, May 11 (AP).—Lenore Ulric, famed for her stage role of "Lulu Belle," is recovering in a hospital from a foot infection and fatigue, her attorney, David Stillman, disclosed today.

D. A. Edwards, College Head, Is Dead at 70

Funeral of Civic Leader Set for Tomorrow at Holy Comforter.

Daniel A. Edwards, 70, founder and president of Columbian Correspondence College and a former president of the Federation of Citizens Associations, died yesterday at his home, 1008 Massachusetts avenue northeast. He had been ill for several months.

Mr. Edwards had been a resident fo Washington since 1896, when he came to Washington with his brother, James. The two founded the correspondence school, which Mr. Edwards conducted until his death.

Born in Port Huron, Mich., Mr. Edwards taught for two years in country schools and then entered the University of Michigan. He graduated in 1894 with a bachelor of laws degree. After having been admitted to the Michigan bar, he returned to college and was awarded his master of laws degree in 1896.

Mr. Edwards was president of the Lincoln Park Citizens Association for nine years, and also was president of the Eastern High School Home and School Association. He was a trustee of the Public Library for nine years and for two years was president of the Board of Education. He was a director of the Savings, Security & Commercial Bank, a director and vice president of the Francis Scott Key Corporation, was a fourth degree member of the Knights of Columbus, and also belonged to the Holy Name Society of Holy Comforter Catholic Church and to the Ancient Order of Hibernians.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Katherine Edwards; three sons, James, Angus and John Edwards, and a daughter, Mrs. Lydia Monaghan.

Funeral services will be held at Holy Comforter Church at 8 a. m. tomorrow.

Stolen Louisiana Timber Is Traced To London Stands

New Orleans, May 11 (U.P.).—Police here tonight believed that part of the multitude waiting for the coronation parade in London was sitting on timbers stolen from Louisiana.

Detective Capt. Gregson said he had traced to London part of $15,000 worth of lumber stolen three months ago from a Bogalua, La., mill.

It consisted chiefly of 8x8, 25-foot long pine timbers. He added that such heavy duty wood would be needed in reviewing stands.

Virginia Coal Miners Accept New Contract

St. Charles, Va., May 11 (AP).—After six weeks of idleness, approximately 1,200 employes of the Blue Diamond Coal Co. agreed today to return to work under new contracts.

Jim Duncan labor leader at the Bonny Blue Mine, one of two affected by the strike, said both sides "gave and took" on wage and hour clauses of the new contract which leaders signed today.

Funeral Friday For A. C. Wrenn, Engineer Clerk

Veteran to Be Buried in Congressional Cemetery.

Funeral services for Augustus C. Wrenn, 68, a chief clerk in the Navy Department for nearly 40 years, will be held Friday morning at 10 o'clock at Hines' undertaking establishment. Burial will be in Congressional Cemetery, with the Rev. F. J. Bohanan, of Rock Creek Church, officiating.

Mr. Wrenn, who had served as the chief clerk in the Bureau of Engineering since 1910, died suddenly at his home, 407 Rock Creek Church road, late Monday night.

He had been in excellent health until a week ago, when he complained of feeling ill, and remained away from his office for several days. His death was attributed to a heart attack.

He was recognized as one of the greatest authorities on naval engineering in the Navy Department. He was appointed chief clerk of the Bureau of Equipment in 1898 and continued in that capacity when the bureau was renamed the Bureau of Engineering in 1910.

A native of Virginia, he came to Washington as a small child with his parents. After attending local public schools, he held several positions before being appointed to the Navy Department.

In 1893 he married Ida Virginia Kemp, of this city. In 1928, a year after her death, he married his present wife, who was at his bedside at the time of his death. His only son, Arthur S. Wrenn, a pay clerk in the Navy, was drowned in the Panama Canal nine years ago. A daughter, Mrs. Stephen T. Early, wife of one of President Roosevelt's secretaries, survives.

Store Sales Climb.

Richmond, May 11 (AP).—Department stores in the Fifth Federal Reserv District sold 7.7 per cent more during March and April this year than during the corresponding period in 1936, the Fderal Reserve Bank of Richmond reported today.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

'If He Won't Get a Divorce and Marry Me, What Am I to Do?' Asks File Clerk Who Loves Married Man.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a 26-year-old file clerk (divorced) and desperately in love with a 38-year-old married man. I have been keeping company with him over a period of several months and we have tried to be very secretive about it but now our business associates are beginning to find out about us. He tells me that he loves me but I don't believe it; I think he has always loved his wife an d always will.

We are both employed in the same corporation, I in the filing section and he is an attorney in the legal department. I am not supposed to handle the files for his section but I manage to make excuses to go to his office to see him, usually to consult him on some legal question. The head of the filing section has become suspicious and watches me. I am afraid she knows something.

At times we have met in his office after hours; sometimes when I am leaving early I call him and he picks me up on a side street before the crowds start coming out; and lots of times he picks me up after night school where I am studying law and we spend the evening together when he can manage to deceive his wife as to his whereabouts. For the past week or so she hasn't been felling well—nothing serious but just sick enough not to want to go out—so it has been easy for him to frame something and meet me, and we have been together constantly.

His wife is a beautiful, lovely young woman and though she doesn't make a fuss over him in public, I am quite sure she loves him. They have been married about 10 years and have no children. Naturally, with no children to bother her and money to spend on herself (as he makes a fine salary) she keeps herself looking beautiful at all times. Recently he bought a new car and she has that to add to her pleasure. Upon the few occasions I have run into them together, they call each other "honey" or some such loving name, and I writhe in jealousy at the thought of it, but neither my escort nor his wife can tell from my expression how intimate we have been.

* * * *

I was secretly married a couple of years ago and didn't announce it until some time later. I have a child and was divorced a couple of months ago. My husband didn't attempt to contest the suit. My baby lives with my parents down south. My mother and father have never forgiven me for my folly and thrusting my child on them to care for at their age, after they had already reared a family. They seem to begrudge my visits home and when I am accompanied by another young man I have been going with, they act as though they think he is another lover and seem to suspect us of improper relations, even though we occupy separate rooms.

* * * *

My married lover is a fine man of charming personality and high moral character and popular with everyone. Women are particularly attracted to him. He has such lovely, gracious manners. He drinks very little and has no real bad habits. All the men tease him about us file girls, but he doesn't seem to mind. He is well educated and lovable from every standpoint. And though he has been telling me for almost a year that he loves me, I don't believe it. Probably I am wrong in doubting him, because, after all, I am a grown woman—as grown as I will ever be—have been married, had a baby, been divorced, and know what it is all about. I am a free agent; free to come and go as I please, and it is up to me to say "No," but I really don't want to say "No," because he makes a nice salary and gives me things I could never buy myself. He is very kind and gives me money on the first and fifteenth, which I wait for eagerly, but when I mention divorce he just sits still, blushes and immediately changes the subject.

* * * *

In order to win him I started studying law in a local night school, thinking by so doing I could impress him by appearing studious and getting on the same mental plane with him. But I don't think it impressed him in the least. He is just as charming and polite as ever, but steers away from divorce. The school I am attending requires no preliminary education (if it did, I couldn't have got in, as I haven't any educational background) and everybody in Washington seems to be studying law. Thousands of would-be lawyers are turned out every year, so I guess it's natural he wouldn't be much impressed. I am getting desperate now and thinking of giving up the law course.

* * * *

But here is my problem—one mysterious thing I can't understand—this man goes around boasting me to all the men and particularly to one meddlesome, repulsive old bachelor (a close friend of his) who gave me a rush when he noticed I was on friendly terms with the other man. This bachelor had the nerve to ask me if I cared for his married friend. I looked horrified and emphatically denied the suggestion. He said some vulgar things about him, and about certain girls he himself had taken out. I agreed with what he said, however, to throw him off the track.

Well, anyway, this married man tells what wonderful marks I make at school, which is an exaggeration, as I barely get by with 70s. I am average in intelligence and looks (not enough to rate a second glance) and yet he raves on and on about my good points. There is something funny about this. If he really cared for me, would he try to "sell" me to other men? And isn't it possible if I were accidentally to rope in and marry some other man he knows, that he might then expose me and brag about his sordid affair with a file clerk; saying I had been his mistress and that he was glad to pass on his damaged goods to some sucker? You know, Miss Haworth, you never can tell about men. Some of the nicest, kindest-seeming men will do this very thing.

* * * *

But if he won't get a divorce and marry me, what am I to do? I can't go on like this forever. I have tried staying away from him for days at a time, but the longing for his caresses is only intensified. If I gave up my job I would have no chance at anything else, I fear. I wouldn't worry so much except that people are finding out about us and I am afraid he is going to get frightened and drop me sooner or later and then I will lose my job.

DESPERATE.

The Thing to Do.

DEAR DESPERATE: It seems scarcely possible that this letter is sincerely indited by a 26-year-old woman. Almost it seems it should be ignored as a phoney document concocted for the purpose of baiting me. However, just on the chance that it may be a genuine appeal for guidance, I shall give it serious consideration.

* * * *

You know little of life and men if you suppose a man far above you profesionally, socially and intellectually, who finds your favors purchasable—who finds you greedily anticipating and as greedily accepting certain cash payments on the first and fifteenth of each month—is going to put aside his lovely and loving wife to marry you. Had he found you above cash price; had it seemed he could have your whole heart and being only in return for a similar commitment of himself; then, were he profoundly attracted by your charms, he might seriously consider making a change in your favor.

* * * *

Worldly men of your lover's type, who live by the double standard, quite instinctively pigeonhole women in two classifications: those whom they secretly despise while selfishly exploiting them for purposes of sexual gratification; and those whom they respect, worship, cherish and cling to in their best moments and in their moments of greatest need. Your conduct in this affair has served only to identify you unmistakably with the lesser type, and to throw the other woman into contrasting and advantageous relief as belonging to the higher—the more truly lovable —type. If forced to choose between you, I have no doubt he would choose his wife without a moment's hesitation. He would choose her not only for herself, but to save his professional and social face. He will dismiss you rather than divorce his wife, rather than be caught red-handed in faithless dalliance with a gold-digger inferior. Your only chance of bagging him—and it is a slim one, even so—is that his wife, in outraged pride, might insist on a divorce if she knew of the affair. Then you might get him on the rebound, though it is doubtful. More probably, he would hate you for what he felt you had done to his life.

As a divorcee, as a woman who professes to "know what it is all about," you cannot hold him to account on the plea that he despoiled your innocence. You are, as you say, a free agent, who went into this affair with your eyes open; who could have—and would have—said "no" had you really wanted to; and most damning of all, you have profited financially by the arrangement.

My advice to you is to quit this affair at once, regardless of what emotional pangs it may cost you. It's lamentable to lack character—as you do—and even worse to lack both character and reputation. Your only hope of developing the one and restoring the other is to break off this intrigue, if you have to give up your job to do it. Maybe the man—since he press-agents you so enthusiastically—would be willing to use his influence in getting you a job elsewhere. Tell him things can't go on; that discovery and disgrace is imminent for both; that you can only break off by getting away, and ask him, as one last favor, to help you find another job, as far away from him as possible.

Were it not for the fact that your very parents distrust you, I would sugest that you try to nd some means of having your child with you. The necessity for living up to a child's innocently admiring and fully dependent trust often promotes character growth when all other challenges fail. It is a powerful incitement to quiet living, decent association and ethical conduct.

M. H.

Tomorrow's Problem

What should young wife do when husband neglects and abuses her, worships their 2-year-old son, and permits his mother to sponge off him? This problem will be considered here tomorrow.

Baroness von Krieger Favors Black Dresses

Paris (U.P.).—Baroness von Krieger, named one of the world's best dressed women in 1935 and 1936, buys her clothes from the same couturiere. She frequently dresses in black to form a contrast with her blonde Dutch coloring, and her latest selection was an evening gown of black crepe that is made with a low cut decollete back and front and a draped sash at the hight waistline.

Outdoor Furniture Is Waterproof

Until recent years, porch and outdoor furniture has been unsatisfactory because of changing weather. Unexpected rains have meant ruin to pieces left out overnight. Within the last few years, chemists have found a covering for this furniture which is waterproof and vermin proof as well as attractive to look at. No longer does the family hesitate to leave the comfort of living room chairs for the open porch, for now outdoor furniture may be just as comfortable. The sofa and chair shown here are of white waterproof material with red diagonal stripes. The odd chair is of red cloth with white binding. The curtains, showing through the window, are of thin cotton interwoven with strips of cellophane for an added touch of coolness.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Logan Clendening.

Drugs for Constipation.

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

In the two previous articles this week we have considered the laxative effect of fruits, especially fruit juices, and of roughage in different food substances. These two food elements correspond to two classes of cathartics. One is a chemical irritant; the other is a mechanical irritant. The fruit juices, especially those of the citrus fruits and grapes, we pointed out, act very much as a mild dose of salts would. Everybody must have had the experience of the laxative effect of molasses. This, despite the fact that it leaves no food residue whatever in the large bowel. It acts chemically to increase peristalsis.

Drugs which imitate this chemical stimulation are cascara, aloes, senna, phenolphthalein (present in candy drugs), licorice and calomel.

The roughage containing or bulk producing cathartics are bran, agar, psyllium seed, mineral oil, flaxseed and tragacanth. These act by furnishing a residue which remains in the large bowel and produces mechanical irritation. Psyllium seed, for instance, swells and produces a large glucilaginous, rubbery mass. So does tragacanth. A level spoonful of this in a glass of water left overnight makes a glassful of jelly.

There is quite a controversy as to whether bran should be used in constipation or not. There is no question that there is a large group of people who are sensitive to bran, and whose intestinal tracts are irritated by it. For this reason, it has been condemned wholesale. In children certain authorities are of the opinion that "They are very intolerant" of high cellulose diets, and for some brown bread is far too irritating." For most people, however, bran, properly prepared, is a valuable method in the treatment of constipation.

Cooked in its natural admixture with the other constitutents of grain, as in graham bread or shredded wheat, it is not very harsh. If it is used raw by itself it is irritating to most people. It is effective only when there is habitual lack of roughage in the diet, and is contraindicated in irritated conditions of the stomach and of the bowels, such as colitis and mucous colitis.

In a group of cases carefully studied, constipated men all were relieved by bran in daily amounts of about one tablespoon, while only one-third were relieved by excess fruits and vegetables.

Mrs. J.: "My 12-year-old daughter has had a lot of trouble with her teeth. They are soft and decay very easily. I send her to a dentist every month to have them filled. I have been giving her calcium A tablets. Should I continue with these?"

Answer: Yes, and also with plenty of fruits and vegetables and some cod liver oil.

Tasty Chocolate Dishes Rank First Among Various Flavors

Souffle, Pie, Cake, Cookies, Bread and Other Foods Heightened by 'Food for the Gods;' New Recipes Listed.

By Rebekah Blake.

THE RESPONSE to the Chocolate Recipe Contest, held by The Washington Post last week, confirmed the fact that chocolate is considered one of the most popular flavors of all the foods. The "food for the gods" finds its place in many recipes as chocolate souffle, chocolate pie, cake and cookies, chocolate omelet and bread and chocolate ice cream and mousse.

The first prize, $3, was won by Mrs. B. P. Hessler, 218 S street northeast, for her recipe for Chocolate Pineapple Pie.

The second prize, $2, was awarded to Miss Frances Pearson, Leesburg, Va., for her recipe for Chocolate Fruit Bread; the third prize, $1, went to Mrs. J. H. French, Lincoln, Va., for her recipe for Chocolate Omelet Souffle, and the fourth prize, also $1, went to Mrs. Mary Miller Plott, of Greencastle, Pa., for her recipe for Steamed Chocolate Pudding with Frozen Mint Sauce. The fifth prize, $1, was awarded to Mrs. Alice S. Youngman, Meadowood, Silver Spring, Md.

Here is Mrs. Hessler's recipe:

Chocolate Pineapple Pie.

Chocolate pastry:
¾ cup flour
3 tablespoons cocoa
1 tablespoon sugar
½ teaspoon salt
¼ cup shortening
3 tablespoons ice water
2 tablespoons butter.

Sift the dry ingredients together four times. Cut in the shortening coarsely and add enough ice water to make a stiff dough. Roll out about ¼ inch thick and spread one half with one-half of the butter cut in small pieces. Fold over, roll out and spread with the other half of the butter in the same manner. Chill after folding the roll out to ⅛ inch thick and fit over the back of a nine-inch deep pie plate. Prick with fork, chill again and bake in hot oven about 15 minutes. First 10 minutes bake at 450 F., then reduce to 400 F. for remainder of the time.

Pineapple Filling.

1 tablespoon gelatin
3 tablespoons cold milk
½ cup milk
¾ cup sugar
3 tablespoons flour
¼ teaspoon salt
3 eggs
¼ cup butter
¾ cup pineapple syrup
¼ cup lemon juice
1 tablespoon grated lemon rind

Soak the gelatin and 3 tablespoons cold milk together for 5 minutes. Scald the milk, combine sugar, flour and salt and stir gradually into scalded milk. Cook 15 minutes in double boiler, stirring continually. Add yolk well beaten and cook 5 minutes longer. Remove from fire and add butter and gelatin, stirring until gelatin has dissolved. Add syrup and lemon juice and rind. Cool. Fold in stiffly beaten whites and turn into baked shell. Chill. Cover with sweetened whipped cream and arrange the spears of pineapple as spokes of a wheel on top. Keep in ice box until ready to serve.

Miss Pearson's recipe:

Chocolate Fruit Bread.

2½ cups cake flour
4 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon cinnamon
¾ cup nuts, chopped
1 egg
¼ cup brown sugar
1 cup milk
2 tablespoons melted butter
1-3 cup melted chocolate
¾ cup seedless raisins

Measure the flour after sifting and sift again with baking powder, salt and cinnamon; add the nuts and raisins. To the beaten egg add the sugar and then the milk. Combine with flour mixture, beat well and then add the melted butter and chocolate. Bake in a loaf cake pan in a moderate oven (350 to 375 F.) for about ¾ of an hour. Slice when cold, put together with cream cheese and cut diagonally.

Mrs. French's recipe follows:

Chocolate Omelet Souffle.

1 tablespoon of finely grated chocolate
5 whites of eggs
3 yolks of eggs
4 tablespoons of confectioners' sugar
½ teaspoon vanilla

Cream the sugar and yolks of eggs well together, add the chocolate, vanilla and the stiffly beaten whites of eggs. Turn into a well-buttered pan, bake in a moderately hot oven. Serve dredged with confectioners' sugar.

Mrs. Plott's recipe:

Steamed Chocolate Pudding with Frozen Sauce.

Sift one cup of flour, ¼ teaspoon of salt and 1½ teaspoons baking powder. In the top of a double boiler melt 3 tablespoons of butter and 1½ squares of unsweetened chocolate. Cool slightly and stir in ½ cup sugar, 1 egg, unbeaten, and ½ teaspoon vanilla. Add alternately 1-3 cup of milk with the dry ingredients. Pour into a well-greased mold, filling it about 2-3 full. Cover tightly and steam for 1½ hours. Unmold and when somewhat cooled cut in slices. Serve with frozen mint sauce.

Frozen Mint Sauce.

Whip 1 cup of cream until light. Add ⅛ teaspoon salt, ¼ cup confectioners' sugar, 3 or 4 drops oil of peppermint and enough coloring to obtain a light green. Freeze in your accustomed manner in refrigerator or freezer.

Mrs. Youngman's recipe:

Chocolate Fruit Cookies.

¾ cup shortening (½ butter preferred)
2 cups light brown sugar
2 eggs
1 cup sour milk
1½ teaspoons soda, dissolved in milk
3 cups flour
1 cup raisins
1 cup nut meats, cut fine
2 squares chocolate
2 teaspoons vanilla
½ teaspoon cinnamon

Cream shortening. Add sugar and cream well. Add the melted chocolate and the well-beaten eggs. Add sour milk and soda alternately with the flour and cinnamon, and then the vanilla, adding last of all the nuts and raisins. Drop on greased cookie sheets. Bake in a moderate oven. These cookies will keep for days.

It's Easy to Reduce

YOU'D LIKE to be light and graceful as a girl again?

It's fun, Mrs. A's way. She knows her calories and exercises her intelligence. By taking life easy while she reduces, she gets used to eating less. She drinks a glass of orange juice for the mid-afternoon "gone" feeling. It's enough fuel for a 150-pound woman to use up in reading for an hour. No left-over calories to pile up in a double chin! Soon she'll be lithe and slender. Her reduced appetite makes it simple to stay that way.

Mrs. B tries to reduce by exercising her muscles. See! She'll have to play tennis furiously for 1 hour and 20 minutes to keep that 400-calory fudge sundae from fattening her. She'll be hungry as a bear afterward. Likely she'll raid the ice-box and undo the slendering effect of her exercise.

If you're an active housewife, you burn 2,400 calories of food a day, as a steam engine burns coal. If you eat more than you burn, the extra calories are stores as fat. To grow slim, eat fewer calories than you burn; this makes your body dra won your stored-up gat.

To slip off 1 to 2 pounds a week, limit yourself to 1,200 calories a day, mostly in bulky low-caloory foods that fill you comfortably. Only 100 calories in 2 large cucumbers, in 15 large stalks of asparagus, 1¼ cups skim milk, 11-3 cups fresh strawberries, or ½ cup salmon.

Jewelry Is in Fashion Again For Man Who Dresses Well

Seal Rings, Diamond Studs Pear Stickpins Reappear.

By Malvina Lindsay.

After 20 years of scorning stickpins, rings and fancy cuff buttons as "sissified," men are now rushing to the jewelry counters to adorn themselves. Within the year, predicted Mrs. June Hamilton Rhodes, New York fashion authority, they will be as resplendent as the bridegrooms in the family albums.

Mrs. Rhodes, who addressed the American National Retail Jeweler's Association in session here, warns that no man need think he can escape the jewelry fad. "Men without jewelry now look as undressed as do women without it," she said. "The mode of elegance has struck women, and men simply have to dress up to it."

Jewelry for men went out about the time of the World War, according to Mrs. Rhodes. In the two decades that followed men kept getting more and more informal in their attire and finally descended to wearing what she terms "underwear buttons" in their cuffs. Now all that is changed. The wise man would do well to start hinting to his wife or sweetheart for some ornamental cuff buttons for his next birthday.

Watch Chain Essential.

Another thing, Mrs. Rhodes said, "let no man think he can go to parties wearing a wrist watch. He must have a fine gold watch with a chain to loop across his chest." And that is not all. It will be very bad form for him to appear without a stickpin in his tie. Pearl stickpins are "good" both for street and afternoon wear and gold and diamond ones also are impressive. Furthermore, if any man protests, Mrs. Rhodes would remind him that all the Wall street brokers are doing it.

The dandy who flashed a diamond, ruby or sapphire on his little finger is back again, according to Mrs. Rhodes. Even the swaggering muscle flexing types are doing this, and also are going in for seal rings with their family coats of arms in enamel.

Diamond shirt studs also flash from manly bosoms and the man who would be up to the minute in this fad should emulate the one clothes fad that is attributed to King George VI, namely, the wearing of one single diamond stud in the front of his shirt.

Mrs. June Hamilton Rhodes.

In Boston, Mrs. Rhodes reported, the diamond shirt stud fad is going in a big way and she predicted it will soon spread to the wide open spaces.

This wearing of jewelry is all of the general dress-up movement on the part of men, Mrs. Rhodes points out. The Paris designers started it, the women followed, and now the men are getting into line. It is manifesting itself in the increased interest in formal attire on the part of men. Men who formerly professed to hate dressing up now are buying tail cots in a big way and young men who wish to look successful are wearing morning clothes again.

"Every man might as well join the formal dress and jewelry movement," said Mrs. Rhodes. "Nothing on earth but another war will stop it."

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

New York, May 11.

WELL, today's the big day over there. In London, I mean. You remember—the crowning and all that? Millions from all over the earth gathered in the historic capital of the English-speaking world to honor the new King and fill British coffers—to hear the mystic liturgy which makes George VI half-man, half-priest—or just to gape at a glittering parade.

ALICE HUGHES

Here in Gotham, where the hands-across-the-sea brigade is both large and showy, we are trying to do our bit, in our quaint Anglo-American way. True, there have been tragic tales, during the past fortnight, of hundreds of ship cancellations by natives who quit the new monarch cold at the eleventh hour, as well as reports from London that large blocks of good parade seats, first priced at five guineas, might have to go on sale at tupence ha'penny unless there was a sudden rush of late buyers. But here in New York, a mere 3,000 wet miles from the scene of the jubilation, we're biting the bullet and trying to carry on in good old British style, remembering that the American Revolution was lost on the playing field of Eton!

And we have a few modest little affairs of our own to celebrate the coronation of the new King. Tonight there is a monster banquet in the grand Waldorf ballroom, graced by big-wigs of both nations. This will be followed by a coronation ball in the armory of the Seventh Regiment of the State militia—the only National Guard outfit in the country which tries to keep up the regimental traditions dear to the hearts of the old country. Tonight the "Dandy Seventh's" officers will probably all speak broad Oxford. A hot time in the old town tonight!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Have you bought, borrowed or purloined a copy of "Coronation Commentary," the book which caused the Duke of Windsor to clap a libel suit on its British publishers? I found it a somewhat muddled, hurried apologia for the British Crown, and the two hot chapters at the back, written after the unhappy abdication, and which roused the royal ire, to be even more hasty. It's all a rather messy job of journalism, it seems to me, and hardly worth all the fuss. . . .

* * * *

Everybody here liked "A Star Is Born" very much, and predicts that the movie will put Janet Gaynor back among the top-flight stars. The film ran at the big Radio City Music Hall for two weeks. . . .

* * * *

About the last of the localities to ship for today's jamboree in London were Sir Hubert Wilkins, the explorer, and Lady Suzanne, his striking frau. Lady Suzanne, who has been crooning in a local night club, is said to have a date to trill at a Buckingham Palace party—and I'll be glad if someone will send me a program just to confirm this.

* * * *

Annual Story, as regular here as Tax-Day—With no "R" in May, Ben Riley starts his usual campaign to sell frogs' 'legs to the metropolis as a substitute for the beloved bivalve, and starts it off with a huge banquet at his far-famed Arrowhead Inn. Ben Riley claims to have served the late Diamond Jim Brady with frogs' hoppers as far back as the spring of 97—and who wants to argue? . . .

* * * *

A man named David sells handbags on Fifth Avenue, and what do you think? In each bag, this spring, he is placing a shiny new dime, just for luck. As he says —what can a Rockefeller do with dimes that he can't?

* * * *

The biggest store in town invited me to dare the perils of Herald Square to look at the world's largest teapot—a huge blimp of a thing that is said to brew 4,884 cups of oolong, or enough to founder a third of the dowagers of London on a given day, especially if cucumber sandwiches are also served. To offset this, the store shows the smallest tea-set, originally made in '24 for Queen Mary. The pot is two inches high, and the cups three-fourths of an inch. After looking at all this impedimenta, I hurried to a snacke shoppe and ordered a thimble of sherry, very dry, please.

Gelatine Salad Is Popular Dish During Spring

GELATINE DESSERTS and salads are not only refreshing and satisfying, but also inexpensive. Moreover, jellied meats and vegetables are appetizing these fresh spring days.

Gelatine and jellied foods are appropriate for the simplest school luncheon or for elaborate buffet suppers. And, as they may be prepared in advance, these jellies are convenient for hurry-up meals.

Perhaps you have a gelatine or jelly food which you consider worthy of a cash prize in The Washington Post Recipe Contest. If so, copy it neatly and send it to Rehekah Blake, The Post food editor, so she will receive it not later than Saturday. The cash prizes for this contest are $3 for first prize, $2 for second prize and $1 for each of the three additional prizes.

Women's Press Club Fetes the Vandenbergs

Senator From Michigan and Wife, Both Former Journalists, Are Guests of Honor at Group's Weekly Luncheon.

TABLE TALK turned to everything from politics to printer's ink yesterday when Senator and Mrs. Arthur H. Vandenberg—both of whom are former members of the Fourth Estate—were guests of honor at the weekly luncheon of the Women's National Press Club at the Willard Hotel.

The Senator's remarks were off the record, but not so his introduction by Miss Mary Hornaday. "It seems the New Deal has some strong opposition in the Senate, and we have him here with us today," said the Press Club president.

Attired in a trim two-piece suit of London tan wool and a hat of natural straw set off with navy ribbon and veil, Mrs. Vandenberg declined to speak either on or off the record. But the Senator turned the spotlight on her continually with frequent references to "my managing editor" and "the boss."

Newspaper parlance comes easy to the Senator. As almost everyone in Washington knows, he was editor and publisher of the Grand Rapids Herald before he came to the Senate. Perhaps fewer persons know that Mrs. Vandenberg was once "Doris Blake," writer of the lovelorn column for the Chicago Tribune.

A record crowd attended the luncheon. Among the guests were Mrs. Mark Bristol, Mrs. Carroll Miller, Mrs. Norman Murray Smith, Mrs. Merle Thorpe, Mrs. Louis Caldwell, Mrs. George R. Holmes, Mrs. Thomas Howell, of Chicago; Mrs. Leslie Wheeler, Mrs. Mastin White and Mrs. Richard Carlson.

Herr Luther Unable to Attend Mrs. Lewis' Tea in His Honor

The retiring German Ambassador, Herr Hans Luther, could not be present at the tea given in his honor at the Mayflower yesterday afternoon by Mrs. James Hamilton Lewis, wife of the Senator from Illinois.

The Ambassador left early yesterday for New York to attend the ceremony for victims of the Hindenburg disaster. In his absence his daughter, Fraulein Gertrude Luther and Frau Kroener received with the hostess in the Pan-American room, where the party was given.

Mrs. George Burnham, of California, who came to Washington to attend the Red Cross convention, was one of the four guests who poured tea during the afternoon. Others who assisted Mrs. Lewis were Mrs. Warren Austin, Miss Laura Harlan and Miss Anne Squier.

Among the guests glimpsed at the party late in the afternoon were the French Ambassador's wife, Mme. Bonnet, in a flowered crepe dress and a small black hat with a white bird perched on the front; Senator and Mrs. Claude Pepper, Admiral and Mrs. Mark Bristol, Senator Theodore Francis Green, the First Secretary of the German Embassy and Frau Scholz, Judge and Mrs. Clarence Norton Goodwin, Baroness von Below, Mrs. Stanley Reed and Miss Elizabeth Howry.

The Latvian Minister and Mme. Bilmanis will entertain at dinner on Friday evening at the Legation on Massachusetts avenue in honor of the Minister of Lithuania and Mme. Zadeikis.

The Military Attache of the British Embassy and Mrs. Torr will close their apartment at the Shoreham about the middle of the month and will go to Edgartown, Mass. Later in the season they will go to Bar Harbor for the late summer.

The Naval Attache of the British Embassy and Mrs. F. C. Bradley have issued invitations for an "at home" on May 17.

Mrs. Roosevelt Is Scheduled To Return to City Tomorrow

Mrs. Roosevelt, who is scheduled to return to Washington tomorrow after visiting her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. John Boettiger, in Seattle, will be joined Friday by the President, who will be back by then from his fishing trip off the coast of Texas.

The White House, which has been almost devoid of social activities for a few weeks, soon will be the scene of a series of garden parties. On Friday Mrs. Roosevelt will entertain members of the Cotton Manufacturing Association, meeting here, and their wives at tea. Saturday afternoon the women executives of the various departments will be guests of the First Lady. Monday afternoon the annual lawn party for the young women attending boarding school in the Capital will be given. On Tuesday there will be a large garden affair to which members of Washington "cave dweller" society have been invited and the following day there will be the veterans' party.

The Ambassador of Brazil and Senhora de Aranha have as their guest the former's brother, Senhor Euclydes Aranha, jr., who recently arrived here from his homeland.

After spending a few weeks in Brussels, the Ambassador of Belgium, Count Robert van der Straten-Ponthoz, will sail for this country on May 19. He will be joined later by Countess von der Straten-Ponthoz.

The Counselor of the Embassy and Princess de Ligne returned to Washington last evening from Atlantic City.

The Ambassador of Poland, Count Jerry Potocki, will sail from Europe the end of this week to return to this country. Countess Potocki will remain in Europe until autumn.

After a short visit in New York, the Secretary of War and Mrs. Woodring have returned to their home, Woodlawn.

The Secretary of Labor, Miss Frances Perkins, has returned to Washington after a brief stay in New York.

The Minister of Sweden and Mme. Bostrom will sail June 5 for their home in Sweden, where they will spend the summer months.

The Minister of Hungary, Mr. John Pelenyu, will return to the Capital the end of the week from Havana, where he has been for a brief visit. Mme. Pelenyu, who is visiting in Cleveland, will join the Minister here over the week-end.

Mrs. John E. Fowler, with her daughter, Miss Dorothy Gould Fowler, has returned to her residence on Sixteenth street after several months in Palm Beach.

Hostess at Party to Celebrate Coronation

Harris & Ewing.

LADY LINDSAY,
who with the Ambassador of Great Britain, Sir Ronald Lindsay, will give a garden party today from 4 to 6 o'clock to celebrate the coronation of their ma jesties, King George VI and Queen Elizabeth.

Lewis Dembitz, Wife on Voyage

Newly-Married Couple to Travel Europe and Palestine.

Mr. and Mrs. Lewis N. Dembitz, who were married in New York Monday, sailed yesterday for a trip to Europe, which will include a special tour of Palestine. They are particularly interested in the latter due to the activity of their relatives, the late Jacob de Haas and Mr. Justice Brandeis, in helping to build the Jewish national home.

Mrs. Dembitz was Miss Florence Anna de Haas, daughter of Jacob de Haas, of New York, noted Zionist leader, historian and journalist. She is a member of the New York bar, was research assistant to City Chamberlain A. A. Berle, jr., and is now a member of the legal staff of the Reconstruction Finance Corportion.

The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. A. Lincoln Dembitz, of Washington. He is the grandson of Lewis N. Dembitz, of Louisville, Ky., eminent lawyer and Jewish scholar, who was a nominator of Abraham Lincoln for the Presidency of the United States, and who was the uncle for whom Justice Louis Dembitz Brandeis is named. A graduate of George Washington University and of the Harvard Graduate School, Mr. Dembitz is a research assistant on the staff of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System.

Going South.

Dr. and Mrs. Lee P. Calfee will leave Washington Friday for Fortress Monroe, Va., where they will spend the week-end. While there, Dr. Calfee will attend the banquet and meeting of the V. M. I. alumni which will be given at Randolph Hall. Maj. Gen. Charles E. Kilbourne, who will be one of the honor guests and is a classmate of Dr. Calfee, will soon take over his new duties as superintendent of the Virginia Military Institute.

THE MERRY WHIRL

By Marylyn

PEOPLE NEVER do what you expect them to, do they? Here, the other evening while out dancing we spied Larry Bungardeanu of Rumania at a nearby table and down the line a bit was fair-haired Olga Patterson, daughter of the former Cuban Ambassador to this country, with a most attentive tall, dark and handsome escort. Now, taking these people into consideration wouldn't you naturally expect the Cuban senorita and her beau to be wildly enthusiastic about Spanish tangoes and rumbas, and the young diplomat from central Europe to be much more interested in Viennese waltzes? But no—when the orchestra struck up a peppery Latin melody it was Larry, who with his lady fair (someone we did not recognize) deserted their ringside table and proceeded to execute the most difficult carrioca steps. Oddly enough, the following piece was a lilting waltz, and in less time than it takes to tell it, we caught a glimpse of Olga and her young senor out in the very center of the floor, taking the long, graceful, slow gliding steps that would gladden the hearts of the most ardent Austrians.

* * * *

Louise Ryder is one tremendously thrilled young lady these days, and busy, too, we might add. She is leaving very soon with her family for West Point, where her father, Lieut. Col. Charles Ryder, is going for station.

Saw Louise the other evening just as she was starting out from the Dresden, where the Ryders live, for a party. She was all bundled up in a white bunny wrap and from what we could see of her gown, it was very attractive—red linen, cut on flaring lines with great floral appliques in vivid shades.

* * * *

Caught sight of Mrs. Tillman Parks and Mrs. Edward Campbell Shields on their way down town yesterday. Mrs. P. had on a frock and cape of sheer crepe printed in aquamarine and brown with the most unique collar fashioned of triple layers of brown linen. With this she wore a flat-crowned sailor of mahogany balibunti straw trimmed with two intriguing straw flowers of brown and aquamarine. Mrs. S. was wearing a navy blue suit with a blue and white printed blouse. Her hat, a huge cart-wheel model of blue rough straw, was trimmed with a garland of field flowers. Her jewelry—of lapis lazuli—carried out the blue motif.

* * * *

Speaking of gowns at "Chevy" reminds us of the start we had when just after seeing Bette Hartz in a most unusual striped chiffon frock, we ran into a perfect stranger attired in a similar model. With this in mind we had gone hardly three steps when we spied Kearsley Caldwell in a blue, green and white creation, with Thalia Bell dittoing the costume not arm's length away.

* * * *

Mrs. William Gibbs McAdoo recently strolling through the lobby of the Shoreham Hotel, where she makes her home, had on a vastly becoming spring, or perhaps we should say summer outfit. The frock was of black silk and was printed with a few wee figures resembling exclamation marks. With this she was wearing a white sailor with a black veil dotted in white. Nice going, and nice looking, we'd say.

Southgates Give Party For Mrs. Robert Scotten

A dyed-in-the-wool New Yorker once remarked that the distinctive feature of Washington entertaining was the fact that so many hostesses in our Capital gave parties in their gardens. Such a party was that given yesterday afternoon by Mr. and Mrs. Richard Southgate at their home on Kalorama road. Behind their house is a small but very attractive garden where the guests gathered to lounge in comfortable chairs and admire the tulips, jonquils and tiny boxwood trees and other attractive spring symptoms.

The party was given in honor of Mrs. Robert Scotten, whose husband is Counselor of the American Embassy at Rio de Janeiro. Mrs. Scotten, who is making her annual visit to Washington, yesterday wore a black silk frock with short puffed sleeves.

Among the guests were many from the State Department, of which Mr. Southgate is chief of protocol, including Mr. and Mrs. Keith Merrill. Mrs. Merrill is leaving June 8 for their summer home on the North Shore of Massachusetts. Others there from the department were Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins, in black; Mr. Ralph Snowden Hill, and the chief of the Mexican Division and Mrs. Edward Reed, the latter wearing a cape of silver fox.

Lady Lewis was present, wearing a figured crepe frock. Others there were the Counselor of the Hungarian Legation, Mr. Anthony de Balasy; First Secretary of the Chilean Embassy and Senora de Huneeus; Mrs. Harold Hinton, in a black silk frock with a red polka-dotted blouse; Mrs. Emory Sands, who recently returned from a stay in New York, and Mr. and Mrs. Phillip Bonsal.

Mary Cowles And Mr. Reed Are Engaged

Bride-to-Be Has Lived in D. C. 2 Years; Wedding Set for October.

Dr. Edward Spencer Cowles, of New York, yesterday announced the engagement of his daughter, Miss Mary Hayward Cowles, to Mr. William Reed, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. William Reed, of Cambridge, Mass. The wedding will take place in Washington October 16.

Miss Cowles is the daughter of the late Mrs. Jaquith Cowles, of Boston, and a sister of Miss Virginia Cowles, who is now in Spain. Miss Cowles will sail for Europe the end of this month to join her sister in Paris. From there they will go to Germany, Poland and Russia, returning to this country in September.

For the last three years Miss Cowles has been secretary to the general counsel of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, Mr. James B. Alley. She made her debut in Boston in 1928 and moved to Washington in December, 1934. Since last spring she has maintained an apartment in Georgetown with Miss Betty Hardie, of New Orleans, and Miss Phyllis Thompson, of New York.

Mr. Reed is employed by American Airlines. He is an aviator with the rank of lieutenant in the Marine Corps Reserves, and is a member of the class of 1930, Harvard University.

Miss Alice Klopstad To Marry on June 28

Miss Alice Klopstad, whose engagement to Mrs. Daniel J. Anderson was announced last winter, has selected June 28 as her wedding day. The ceremony will take place in the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church.

Miss Klopstad, who makes her home with Senator and Mrs. William J. Bulow, will have Miss Katherine Bulow, their daughter, as her maid of honor, and their granddaughter, little Kay Bulow, as flower girl. The latter is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William J. Bulow, jr.

Knott Halts Griffs' Late Rally to Win

By Shirley Povich.
A Staff Correspondent.

Sportsman's Park, St. Louis, Mo., May 11.—Moving into the ball game with two runs in the seventh that tied the score at 4 to 4, the Browns gave those figures and the Nats an awful going-over in the eighth inning and produced a 7-to-5 victory.

It was a pretty said exhibition by the Washington athletes who had various times leads of 3-0 and 4-2, but their pitching—chiefly Pete Appleton's—went sour and the Browns, after some delay, began to splatter base hits all over the premises.

Appleton, called in as a relief pitcher when Monte Weaver began to swoon in the sixth, was a relief only to the Browns. He gave up the two tying runs in the seventh and then he gave up the ball game in the eighth.

Knott Starts Rout.

Jack Knott, who had been doing some rather nice relief pitching for the Browns ever since Russ Van Atta was lifted for a pinch-hitter in the sixth, launched those three-run proceedings in the eighth inning by basing a single into left-field and the rout was on.

Appleton did get the next hitter, Harry Davis, out when Joe Kuhel made a clever throw to second for a first play on Davis' attempted sacrifice bunt, but Appleton never did get anybody else out.

Buddy Lewis didn't help matters any when he took Allen's smash toward third base and pulled Kuhel off the bag with an errant heave to first and Joe Vosmik didn't help matters any, either, when he thumped a double against the right field wall to score Davis and put the Browns ahead, 5-4.

Strategy Fails.

Then the Nats resorted to strategy, purposely walking Beau Bell who had already made four hits, but the thing became habit-forming apparently, because Appleton also walked Clift to force a run over the plate and himself out of the ball game.

Syd Cohen finally got the side out, but not until after he pitched a long fly to Knickerbocker which scored the Browns' third run of the inning. And one reason he got the side out was because he picked the very much surprised Clift off first base a moment later.

The Nats' didn't have much of a ninth inning rally in their systems. Jesse Hill looked at a third strike, but Buddy Lewis beat out a clever bunt and the inning began to have its possibilities when Joe Kuhel doubled against the rightfield screen. But a valiant effort by Johnny Stone took the form of a long fly that settled in Vosmik's arms near the left field fence (scoring Lewis) and Al Simmons brought matters to an unhappy climax by grounding out to Shortstop Bill Knickerbocker.

The Washington athletes came out fighting in the opening round and bashed the pitching of Russ Van Atta for four hits and a 2-to-0 lead right off the bat—off the bats of Jesse Hill, Johnny Stone, Al Simmons and Buddy Myer, rather.

Hill, making his 1937 debut in the Nats' outfield because Ben Chapman reported a sore knee and a sore arm, smacked a single into leftfield to start it. Matters lapsed as Lewis and Kuhel popped out, but Stone beat out a single to Davis. Simmons slashed a single into left, Myer spilled a single down the left-field line and the Nats had their two runs.

Hit Two-Bagger.

They went out and got another one off Van Atta in the second inning when Weaver walked, and eventually scored on a two-bagger by Buddy Lewis, who whaled a pitch against the screen in right center, 354 feet away.

Monte Weaver somehow escaped being scored on during the first three innings when he was giving up five hits to the Browns, and he went into the fifth with his 3-to-0 lead intact. But he came out of it with his margin cut to a single run.

Cy Blanton Hurls Bucs To 3-0 Win

By the Associated Press.

Boston, May 11.—The Boston Bees made only one threat today when Cy Blanton, the Pittsburgh Pirates' screwball flinger, hurled the National League pace-setters to a 3-0 shutout, rgistering for the visitors a clean sweep of the three-game series at the hive.

Blanton, en route to his third triumph in four starts, had easy sailing until the fifth, which Vince DiMaggio opened with a double. Elbie Fletcher then laid down an infield single and the bases were loaded with none out after Cy nit Eddie Mayo with one of his serves.

At that stage the Pirates had a 2-0 lead, but Blanton steadied, forced A. Lopez to foul out to Gus Suhr, who was playing his 800th game for the Pirates, and then fed Baxter Jordan, pinch-hitting for Pitcher Danny MacFayden, a double-play ball.

Roy Johnson Sold By N. Y. Yankees

Chicago, May 11 (AP).—Manager Joe McCarthy announced today before the start of the final game with the White Sox that the Yankees had sold Outfielder Roy Johnson to the Boston Bees. All American League Clubs waived on the 33-year-old veteran.

Johnson immediately left for Boston. Starting at his post in left field against the Sox this afternoon was Tom Henrich, 21-year-old recruit, who joined the team this morning after being recalled from the Newark "farm" in the International League.

Johnson came to the Yanks on January 17, 1936, from the Red Sox with Pitcher Irving (Bump) Hadley in exchange for Pitcher Jimmy DeShong and Outfielder Jesse Hill. For 12 games this season he was batting .298, after leading the Yankee sluggers in their exhibition games this spring.

Boston Beats Tribe; Errors Hurt Detroit

Rookie George Caster Holds Bengals to 4 Hits as Phenomenal A's Forge Ahead; Six Errors by Tigers Forecast Doom.

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, May 11.—The Philadelphia Athletics seized undisputed first place in the American League today, beating Detroit 4 to 1 behind the four-hit pitching of Rookie George Caster, as Cleveland lost to Boston.

Roxie Lawson, Detroit pitcher tagged for his first defeat after four successive victories, gave up only six hits, but two of the blows were home runs by Bob Johnson, with Bill Werber on base in the first inning, and Wally Moses in the seventh.

The Tigers committed six errors, three of them by Shortstop Billy Rogell, but none figured in the Philadelphia scoring. The lone Tiger run was unearned. Charley Gehringer scoring in the first inning as Gerry Walker's slow grounder rolled through Bill Cissell's hands.

Walker singled in the fourth to run his consecutive hitting streak to 17 games.

Indians Defeated By Boston, 11-4

Cleveland, May 11 (AP).—The Indians dropped out of their first-place tie with the Philadelphia Athletics with a thud today as Boston landed on three Cleveland pitchers for 11 hits and an 11-to-4 victory.

It was the first defeat for the Indians in six games.

Jimmy Foxx hit his second home run of the season in the third inning, scoring Cramer ahead of him. In the first inning he doubled, scoring two teammates.

O'Brien Equals Stadium Record in Low Hurdles Contest.

Jack O'Brien, a slim, raven-haired youth with a stout heart and strong, sinewy legs, bounced over the 220-yard low hurdle course yesterday afternoon in 26.2 seconds to equal the stadium record for the event and steal the spotlight as Catholic University defeated Johns Hopkins' trackmen, 85-41, at Brookland.

Exhibiting an improved stride in the race, rendered more difficult by a curve at the very outset, O'Brien went to the head of the pack at the crack of the starter's gun and was three yards in front of the tape. Paul O'Neil, a teammate, crossed the line second, with still another Cardinal standard-bearer, Gil Borgis, third.

O'Brien's effort equaled the mark established five years ago by Vincent Fraatz, an all-around star in his day, and now one of "Dutch" Bergman's assistants.

Fred Mix made a real contest of the mile run, although he lost to Driscoll after a thrilling stretch run. Mix came up fast turning for home, but this effort only served to force Driscoll into a faster stride, and as a result both men bettered their usual time for the distance by five full seconds. The winning time was 4 minutes 36 seconds.

Other outstanding features were Corrado Goffredi's pole vaulting, and "Dixie" Walker's victory in the century. Walker won with the best sprint of the season, 10.2 seconds, while Goffredi, apparently completely recovered from an arm ailment, sailed over the crossbar at 11 feet 6 inches.

100-yard dash—Won by Walker (C.); second, Rome (J. H.); third, Breslau (J. H.). Time, 0:10.2.

One-mile run—Won by Driscoll (J. H.); second, Mix (C.); third, MacCarthy (C.). Time, 4:36.

220-yard dash—Won by McCulloch (C.); second, Walker (C.); third, Breslau (J. H.). Time, 0:23.6

.110-yard high hurdles—Won by O'Neill (J. H.); second, Hoops (J. H.); third, Weedon (C.). Time, 0:17.8.

Two-mile run—Won by Driscoll (J. H.); second, O'Neil (C.); third, Messuri (C.). Time, 11:00.

220 yard low hurdles—Won by O'Brien (C.); second, O'Neil (C.); third, Gilborgis (C.). Time, 0:26.2 (equals stadium record).

880-yard run—Won By Mix (C.); second, Rosner (J. H.); third, Weedon (C.). Time, 2:6.6.

St. John's Netters Lose.

Annapolis, Md., May 11.—Allowing the locals but one set each in the singles and doubles, Lafayette defeated St. John's this afternoon on the latter's tennis courts by 7 to 2. George Ennis, St. John's, led off by winning from William Hatch in singles, and with Todd Grier, defeated Hatch and Bob Anstett in the doubles. Lafayette taking all other matches.

Old Line Scores 10-6 Victory Over Temple

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Maryland took Temple's baseball team apart yesterday at College Park and discovered that the Owls' hooting was much more impressive than their hitting, and consequently won a 10-6 decision from the Philadelphians.

Temple's hooting was as prolific as it was Monday when it lost to Georgetown, but the boys neglected to match their hot, descriptive adjectives with even lukewarm base hits, and elocution, it seems, is not counted in the box score.

Messrs. Shoemaker and Cox, the umpires, caused Temple's violent outburst of vituperation, and it was the steady twirling of Charley Weidinger and George Wood that was respinsible for their anemic attack. Until Weidinger eased up in the eighth, letting in three runs, the Owls might just as well have been sitting with the spectators.

The sum total of their batting amounted to eight hits, one a double, while their heckling added up approximately a half hour of wasted time and an undetermined amount of wasted debate. Temple's argument made even less impression on the arbiters than its bats against Wood's relief hurling.

"Knocky" Thomas, Old Line catcher, presented the Owls with their first run of the game, throwing wild to third trying to catch Kovacevich, who doubled, and was moving up on Garrison's sacrifice bunt. Bekampis, on first as a result of Wheeler's error, went to third on the play, and followed Kovacevich home on Coyne's grounder to first.

Temple got its third run in the sixth on a walk to Kadony, and singles by Seber and McKenna. In the eighth they got three runs on as many hits and an error, before Wood appeared on the mound and threw three strikes to Mottola, ending the inning. In the ninth the visitors got two men on base, the result of a hit and another error, before a neat double play, Mike Surgent to "Shorty" Chumbris to George Knepley, ended the game.

Maryland scored four runs and gained the lead in the third on a rally started by Weidinger's triple. "Shorty" Chumbris singled, stole second and went to third on "Lefty" Chumbris' infield out. Thomas drew a pass, going to second as "Shorty" Chumbris scored on a passed ball. He counted on Wheeler's error, and the latter came home on Bill Bryant's booming two-bagger.

Jack Williams, Temple's ace pitcher, was called to the mound to quell a disturbance early in the fourth inning, but the Terps already had three runs and the ball game before he arrived. Johnson's single, Knepley's sacrifice, Kovacevich's error on Weidinger's grounder, and passes to the Chumbris boys caused the trouble.

Singles by Wheeler and Bryant were the most potent blows struck in the eighth-inning rally, which produced three runs, offsetting Temple's spree, and definitely decided the issue.

Joe Wagner Rides Compton Entry to Victory in Whetstone Point Purse

Weston Wins Feature Race At Pimlico

Royal Rank Runs 2d, Sir Quest Third in Whetstone Purse.

By the Associated Press.

Pimlico Race Track, Baltimore, May 11.—Weston, operating in the silks of A. C. Compton, California sportsman, won his third race in four starts at this meeting when he took the Whetstone Purse, outstanding event on today's program here. Rallying to the urging of Jockey Joe Wagner, the 5-year-old, sired by either Nocturnal or Sun Flag, fairly ate up the ground in the stretch to draw out to a length-and-a-quarter victory over William Elder's Royal Rank. Mrs. E. Denemark's Sir Quest was beaten four lengths for third money.

A. G. Vanderbilt's Savage, a winner here in excellent time in his most recent start, was a heavily backed favorite and after breaking poorly finished fourth. Those in the crowd of 9,000 that invested in Weston were rewarded at the rate of $7.50 for $2.

Royal Rank was the first definite leader as the field of seven got away. He was pressed by Bill Donoghue and Sir Quest. Weston was fifth. However, Wagner guided the ultimate winner to the outside, went to the whip and Weston answered with a drive that could not be denied.

Favorite players among the crowd of 8,500 got off on the right foot when Wandrel, owned by Jay McNamara, won the race that opened today's program of the Maryland Jockey Club. With Jockey Bobby Merritt in the saddle, Wandrel worked her way from last place to win by a half length from H. Kerr's Bally Bay. The latter saved the place by a neck from Queen Govans. For some reason, the judges consulted the photo negative. Wandrel paid a $4.40 mutuel and was clocked in 1:46 1-5 for the mile and 70 yards.

Masked Knight, owned by G. H. (Pete) Bostwick, former gentleman jockey and now a polo star, made every fence a winning one in the day's 2-mile steeplechase. Masked Knight, operating in the role of a $4.90 favorite, finished five lengths in advance of Frederick S. Greene's Drill Master and 13 lengths ahead of J. H. C. Forbes' Axacan. Three others competed and the race was free of mishaps, although Jockey B. Ansteatt, who rode the winner, lost his skullcap the first time around. By coincidence, Masked Knight won his last race exactly a year ago at Belmont. The aged gelding turned in time of 3:52 1-5.

Mobcap, running in the silks of F. J. Buchanan, took a photo finish from Mrs. K. N. Gilpin's Frank Brooke in the fifth race over the five-furlong course. Third money went to H. Neusteter's Micro, the favorite. Mobcap and Frank Brooke fought it out from the start. Bentaur, second choice in the field of ten, was fourth but pulled up lame. Mobcap returned a $19.20 mutuel. Her time was 1:02 1-5.

Baseball's Biggest Surprise? The Macks, of Course!

By George Kirksey.
United Press Staff Writer.

New York, May 11.—Superlatives from the major league dugouts:

BIGGEST SURPRISE PACKAGE—Connie Mack's orphans from Philadelphia, who have started building a home in the American League's first division.

MOST SURPRISING HITTER—The Greek with a "homer," Alexander Kampouris, Cincinnati second baseman, who hit six home runs in three games in five days, one more than he made all last season.

BEST DRESSED TEAM—Chicago Cubs, whose uniforms were designed by the advertising man who created the Wrigley gum sign at Times Square. The uniforms are trimmed with royal blue and dark red. All the players wear royal blue undershirts, only major league team to have all players wearing one color. The uniforms also have zippers on them.

BEST DRESSED PLAYER OFF THE FIELD—Joe DiMaggio, the Yanks' kid who came to Broadway last year without knowing the meaning of a wardrobe, has blossomed out this year with some high priced fancy duds.

TOUGHEST LOSER — Frankie Frisch's St. Louis Cardinals, who squawk and yell robbery even when they lose by ten runs.

LEAST COLORFUL TEAM—Bill Terry's strong, silent Giants. They have nothing to say, and even if they did Terry wouldn't let them. They retire at 9 o'clock every night.

GREATEST STUDENT OF BASEBALL—Carl Owen Hubbell, who studies pitchers as much as batters and can give you the dope on any player in the league, even in his sleep, if necessary.

FASTEST WORKING PITCHER—Charley Root, of the Cubs, who just rears back and fogs 'em in there.

SPEEDIEST PITCHER—Van Lingle Mungo, whose fast ball makes Brooklyn's apartment houses quake when he cuts loose with all his smoke.

BIGGEST QUESTION MARK—Bob Feller, Cleveland's "kid," who was ballyhooed as the player of the year and has pitched only one game and lost it. Some say he may not pitch again for a long while.

HARDEST WORKER—Dr. Andrew Lotshaw, the big liniment man of the Cubs, who hasn't had a good night's sleep since the Cubs left Phoenix, Ariz. Dr. Lotshaw says, "I've given the boys everything but blood 'confusions' and the 'epidemic needle.'" The Cubs have six regulars on the injured list, with their latest addition Shortstop Billy Jurgas, who has an injured wrist.

FUNNIEST PLAYER — I don't know, but I'll bet he's with the Brooklyn Dodgers.

YEAR'S TRAGEDY—Shanty Hogan, the lovable fat guy who resisted tempting steaks and boiled himself down until they called him 'the thin man,' only to have Washington ship him down the river to Indianapolis.

MOST SUPERSTITIOUS PLAYER — Mel Ott, Giants' outfielder whose .218 batting average caused him to change his uniform number yesterday from No. 3 to No. 4, his old favorite. P. S.: Ott's luck changed—from bad to worse, and he struck out twice on his first two times at bat against the Cubs yesterday.

GREATEST MANAGERIAL PRIDE—Gil Brack, Brooklyn outfielder, called "Burleigh's boy." Grimes left Louisville, where he managed last year, he insisted Brack come with him, despite Gilly's batting average of .299. Brack is now hitting over .400 and battling for the league lead.

Pimlico Briefs

M. Nelson Bond, of Baltimore, whose colors have been prominent for years on Maryland tracks, is disposing of his stable at public auction. Bond has taken a position as steward at the Hagerstown, Md., track, which opens a ten-day meeting on May 18.

Pimlico's Preakness may be a $100,000 race in the future, if a plan now said to be favored by some members of the Jockey Club materializes. Under the plan, the race would be made a "futurity." Horses to be eligible would have to be entered at birth, owners paying a small fee. With this nine fees, plus the $50,000 added by the track, the race might become the richest in the country.

Joe Wagner was leading the race for jockey honors at the meeting as yesterday's program opened. He has seven winners to six for Charlie Kurtsinger, of Derby fame.

The Charles Town, W. Va., track has published its book of the meeting due to open May 29. Three $1,000 races are listed and jockey fees have been placed on a par with those paid at Pimlico.

War Admiral will have a running mate in the Preakness. The Glen Riddle Farm is going to send Over the Top to the post under present plans.

Pimlico, Md., May 11.—While turf-writers were trying to determine the make-up of the field to face War Admiral in the Preakness here Saturday, formidable opposition loomed from a new quarter in the hide of Mosawtre, a trim fellow from up New York way. Just as the scribes were putting the finishing touches on stories that indicated that Matey would furnish the chief opposition to the gallant Kentucky Derby winner, Mosawtre turned in a brilliant workout, missing by a fifth of a second of tying the track record for half a mile.

While a half mile is not the route of the Preakness, Mosawtre's time of 0.47 3-5 was impressive. True, he was being hustled along, but he did not seem to have been driven and he was going well within himself.

Mosawtre is in the excellent hands of Max Hirsch, the veteran trainer who surprised the turf world by sending Bold Venture out to win the Derby last year. In addition, the son of On Watch will have a good rider in Hubert LeBlanc, who has piloted him in his successful New York races.

Merry Maker in Trial.

Two other Preakness candidates performed in trial today. Merry Maker, badly defeated in the Derby, galloped three-eights in :36 3-5. Over The Top, a stablemate of War Admiral, went a mile and a quarter, a sixteenth farther than the Preakness, in 2:12. He was clocked at 1:19 2-5 for three-quarters, and 1:45 1-5 for the mile.

There is a possibility that Over The Top may face the barrier Saturday as a rival of War Admiral instead of an entry-mate. Mrs. W. H. Furst, whose Gerald was scratched out of the Derby, has made an offer to the Glen Riddle Farm for the son of Man o' War and Cresta. Mrs. Furst is anxious to have her colors in the Preakness and hopes to close the deal before the entries are made on Friday morning.

If War Admiral is sold, Maurice Peters or Jackie Westrope will do the riding. If the sale is not made, Joe Wagner, leading jockey at this meeting, will have the mount.

Present indications are that the Preakness field will draw not more than ten starters. In addition to War Admiral, Matey and Mosawtre, the other almost certain starters are Pompoon, second to the Glen Riddle Ace at Louisville; Jewell Dorsett, owned by Joe W. Brown and Flying Scot, a dark horse and the property of John Hay Whitney. Among the doubtful starters are the Wheatley Stable's Melodist and T. B. Martin's Court Scandal. There is a vague possibility that Reaping Reward, third in the Derby and in the colors of the Milk Way Stable, may be shipped here in time.

Small Field Is Likely.

There is little indication that any number near the 20 that faced the barrier in the Derby will march postward. Many owners and trainers sent there charges into the Derby, refusing to believe that War Admiral could hold his blinding speed at the mile and a quarter. They now are convinced and horses of the brand of Burning Star, Billionaire and Bernard F. will be left in their barns.

Oddly, a muddy track would cause surprise entries. Many of those in charge of little regarded horses, might take a chance on the theory that War Admiral would not fancy slippery going. Then again, an off track would bolster the chances of Matey, one that has good mud races on his record.

Due to the fact that Harry Richards is under contract to Walter M. Jeffords and must ride Matey in the Preakness, handlers of Pompoon are casting about for a rider. Yesterday, they attempted to get Eddie Arcare, but a New York engagement will keep him away. An offer has been made Georgie Woolf, who rode Azucar to victory in the first $100,000 Santa Anita handicap, and it is believed that he will accept.

Those who bet the daily double of Preakness day will get an added thrill for their money. The steeplechase has been scheduled for the first race and the jumpers will conduct the first half of the popular twin wager. This is the first time since the "double" was introduced in Maryland that the timbertoppers have taken part.

Virginia Trackmen Win Meet, 78-39

Woodberry Forest, Va., May 11.—The University of Virginia track team defeated Woodberry Forest here today, 78 to 39. Frank Fuller, freshman hurdle ace and former Woodberry runner, was hard pressed by his former running mate, George Webster, of the home team, and flashed to victory in both obstacle events, negotiating the highs in 0:15 flat and the lows in 0:24.8, the fastest times recorded on Hanes Field track.

BASEBALL'S BIG SIX/

On the crest of a 4-for-4 batting splurge against the Senators, in the final game of the series yesterday, Roy (Bean) Bell, outfielder of the St. Louis Browns, rode into first place in the American League batting race. He added 39 points to his average to climb from fourth to first. Ival Goodman, of the Reds, picked up six points to take over the National League lead.

Fishing Creek Still Attracts Anglers

Fishing Creek, in Frederick County, still holds the palm for being the most popular stream in this section. It was so overcrowded this week-end that any real sport was impossible. On Saturday the thunder squalls raised considerably the already high water, but for a short time it also raised the browns in a manner that would please any angler.

ACKERMAN

Those anglers that fished Plum Point and Chesapeake Beach during the daylight hours on Saturday and Sunday had little luck. The few we know of being caught went to the night owls.

On Monday the Potomac was as roiled and muddy as it ever gets. There seems to be little chance for any fishing under a week. Joe Fletcher reports a few small rock during the past week.

* * * * *

There is no enemy more dangerous to good fishing than the "fish hog," the man who catches quantities of fish far beyond possible use that he or any of his neighbors can make of them. Disregard of limits is bad sportsmanship of the worst kind. It is the inherent duty of every sport fisherman to make the "fish hog" an unpopular nonsportsman. From Louisiana Conservation Review.

No amount of talk will accomplish this feat, but example will. It is far easier to be a sportsman than a "fish hog," and if this statement might not seem plausable, read again the simple definition of Webster's: A sportsman is one who practices the sports of the field, especially hunting and fishing; one who in sports is generous; one who has recourse to nothing illegitimate; a good loser and a graceful winner.

* * * * *

The heavy rains of the week before last raised the waters of West Virginia streams considerably. Post Notes is informed by Paul Olejar, of the State Conservation Commission, that barring any additional heavy downfall, from now on State waters will be in fine shape.

West Virginia is making wonderful progress, due to a great expenditure of time and effort in the past four years, to build up her hatching facilities into a capacity approximating the supply demanded the sportsmen who use the many miles of State streams to enjoy their fishing.

* * * * *

Anglers fishing the Shenandoah River last year caught bigger bass, on the average, than those casting the South Branch of the Potomac, in the neighborhood of Romney, according to an experimental count. Fishermen at designated stations reported all fish caught, kind of bait used and size of the fish. The South Branch contained more fish, a conclusion drawn from the fact that more undersized specimens were caught there.

* * * * *

Jersey's beaches, bays and inlets supply as fine sport fishing as it is possible to find anywhere along the coast. While known to many local anglers, Post Notes has the thought that full advantage is not being taken of these fine fishing points, that in time used on the road to get to them makes them closer than our sea-fishing Maryland and Virginia resorts.

While there are more than 50 such places from Cape May to Sandy Hook, reports on the fishing that is just about to open up, in addition to being condensed, will be only from the more important inlets, such as Manasquan, Forked River, Cape May, Beach Haven and Atlantic City, but there will be available at The Post switchboard a list of captains and their phone numbers for every point along the whole Jersey shore.

Terp Frosh Win Triangular Meet

College Park, May 11.— Maryland froshmen defeated two school-boy track rivals from Baltimore at College Park yesterday, rolling up a total of 59 points to win. Baltimore City College was second with 39 points, while Baltimore Poly was third with 19.

The Baby Terps won 9 of the 13 events, with Ronald Hulshort and Charley Morris winning two each.

Jim Kehoe, lanky Old Line middle distance ace, stepped the half-mile route in 1:58.9, which is within one-tenth of a second of Coleman Headley's 880-yard school record.

Eddie Bean Shoots 72 In Practice

Chevy Chase Invitation Tourney Has 90 Entrants.

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

A star-studded field of 90 golfers will play over Chevy Chase's velvet-like fairways today in the twenty-seventh edition of the Invitation play for the Taft and Sherman trophys.

Virtually every golfer in this section, including Ralph Quinter, defending champion, will play a qualifying round today for a position in one of the five flights. Match play rounds are on tap Thursday and Friday.

A smattering of out-of-town stars adds a national aspect to the historic tourney. Harry Pitt, Miller B. Stevinson and Quinter are the only former winners competing.

Eddie Bean, Beaver Dam star, who tied for the Woodmont medal last week, played the rugged second nine in 32 strokes yesterday, 2 under par, and paired it with a first nine of 39, for a 72 and the lowest practice round of the day. Bobby Brownell, local amateur champion, making his first competitive start of the year, turned in a trial 72.

The Allen brothers, Don and "Shanty," former Georgetown Prep star and leading winner in the Southern simon-pure events; J. B. Ryerson, from Cooperstown, N. Y., and Walter Pederson from the same State, will play, in addition to two of Baltimore's best, Spencer Overton and Reid Scott.

The long, 6,538-yard layout is in perfect condition, the fairways having a cushion effect. The greens could not be better.

Post entries yesterday included 11:03, George Richardson (Cong.); 12:27, H. Treault (Ind. Spring)); W. W. DeMane (Belle H.); 12:34, Walter Pederson (N. Y.); 2:05, Capt. J. B. Patterson (Boston); 3:05, J. K. McKammon (C. C.); 3:10, Bob Effler (Ken.).

Bash Upsets Heurich, 7-2, With Garvey

Industrial Leaders Get 4 Hits; Other Sand-Lot Games.

Swarthy Joe Garvey, right-handed speedball pitcher of National Savings Bank, scored the biggest upset of the sandlot season yesterday when he set the Heurich Brewers down with 4 hits to score a 7-2 victory on the Ellipse in an Industrial League game.

The league leaders, who are also setting the pace in the Sunday National City League, Section A, were able to get only three singles and a double by Bill Shelton over the former St. Mary's Celtic hurler. He had a no-hit game until the sixth when he allowed both runs scored against him.

A tight game marked the day's play in the U. S. Government League, where Labor Statistics nosed out Naval Air Station, 8 to 7.

In the Federal League, Bureau of Engraving swamped Currency, 19-6, while Federal Alcohol and General Accounting Office continued the hot race in the Sports Center League, Alcohol drubbing RFC, 12-3, and GAO outclassing Loans and Currency, 19-3.

An important game in the Industrial League race is slated for 5 p. m. today on the Ellipse when the league leading O'Donnell's Seafood nine mets Coffey Screen at 5 p. m. Stump Talburt is the likely pitching choice for O'Dannell's.

Brooklyn, May 11 (AP).—After the Cardinals had knocked two Dodger pitchers out of the box and scored seven runs in three innings, their own pitching bogged down and Brooklyn came from behind to win by a score of 9 to 7.

The victory gave the Dodgers two out of three in the series and also boosted them into the first division as they took fourth place away from the Cubs.

Gibby Brack, with a home run, a double and a single; Johnny Cooney, with four hits, including a double, and Cookie Lavasetto, with a single and a homer, featured the 16-hit Dodger assault on four Cardinal pitchers.

Reds Blast Phil Hurlers, Win, 12 to 3

Cuyler Gets 4 Singles, Base on Balls in 6 Times at Bat.

Philadelphia, May 11 (AP).—The Cincinnati Reds blasted three Phillies hurlers for 16 hits and a 12-to-3 victory over the Wilsonmen today. Ivan Goodman, with a home run and double, led the Reds' attack, batting in three runs.

Al Hollingsworth, Reds' southpaw, held the Phils at bay in all but the third and ninth frames, allowing but six hits and fanning five.

Pimlico Fan Returns $200 Paid by Mistake

A racing columnist here recently wrote in his paper that a mutuel clerk at Pimlico had passed out $400 by mistake to a bettor, whose ticket called for but $200. He also wrote that the clerk would have to repay the money or lose his job, and that the clerk's family was poor.

Today a man walked up to the clerk's booth at Pimlico and said:

"I'm the fellow who got that $200. Here it is."

Jacobs Is Beaten By Virginia Nine

Charlottesville, Va., May 11 (AP).—Robert (Bud) Abbitt, the Cavaliers' mound ace, hurled Virginia to a 4-to-1 victory over the University of Richmond's Bucky Jacobs today.

With big league scouts inspecting the slender Jacobs' fine curve ball, the big Virginia right-hander limited the Spiders to two hits and fanned six, three straight in the fifth.

Jacobs, bothered by a shaky ankle, recently injured, struck out eight, but was nicked for eight hits, two by Edmunds. The loss broke his consecutive winning streak extending over three years.

Ex-Champion Dies.

Pittsburg, May 11 (AP).—Mrs. Ellen Forde Hansell Allderdice, who in 1887 won the first National women's tennis championship, died today at the age of 68. She was the widow of Taylor Allderdice, noted industrialist and philanthropist.

Little Hoyas Upset, 8 to 4, By St. Alban's

Woodward Whips Friends, 12-7; Gaithersburg Tops C. H. M. A.

The five-hit pitching of Gardner Marsh led St. Alban's School to an 8-to-4 upset victory over its traditional rival, Georgetown Prep, yesterday at Garrett Park. The winners pounded out a dozen hits off Pitcher Kelly, of the Little Hoyas.

Catcher Hare, of St. Alban's, was the chief offender with three hits in four trips to the plate. St. Alban's took an early lead of 3 to 0 in the first inning. Marsh fanned 13 Little Hoyas. Kelly struck out 11.

Corn Futures Slump in Heavy Selling Wave

Argentine Imports the Cause; Wheat Tumbles 3½ Cents a Bushel.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, May 11.—Unnerved by Nation-wide sweeping competition of Argentine imported corn, Chicago holders of corn futures abandoned efforts today to uphold prices, and rushed wildly to sell. In the stampede, corn values suffered an abrupt fall of 6 cents a bushel maximum, and wheat 3½ cents. Rallies later overcame the losses to only a moderate degree, corn less than 2 cents, wheat about a cent.

At the close, corn futures here were ⅞@4½ cents under yesterday's finish, May, 1.26@1.26⅛; July, 1.15¾@1.15⅞; September, 1.06¾@1.06⅞; wheat, 1 cent to 3 cents down, May, 1.22¼@1.22⅜; July, 1.15⅛@1.15⅜; September, 1.14@1.14⅛; oats off ⅛@⅜; May, 45⅞@45⅞, and rye showing 2¼@3⅞ setback; May, 1.09. Textile Mill Activity 25% Above Year Ago

New York, May 11.—Textile World's index of textile mill activity for the first quarter of 1937 showed a remarkable rate as compared with both last year and a "normal" year—being approximately one-fourth more than the corresponding period of last year and one-third over the first quarter for the 1924-31 average.

Cotton showed the highest rate of increase as against 1936—about 28 per cent—while wool, rayon and silk were bunched together—all approximately 15 per cent over last year. March itself was the most active month, for textile mills, on record.

N. Y. Central Net 59c a Share for March

New York, May 11 (AP).—The New York Central Railroad today reported for March net income after fixed charges of $3,485,637, equal to 59 cents a share on the capital stock. This compares with $50,936 or .01 cent a share in March, 1936. Net railway operating income, before fixed charges and other income, for March totaled $6,284,476 compared with $3,398,320 a year ago.

Net income after fixed charges for the three months ended March 31 was $5,295,094, equal to 90 cents a share, compared with a deficit of $1,041,181, in the same period last year.

Annual Use of Copper Makes 7-Year Record

World Production of Gold and Silver Less Than Year Ago.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 11. — Domestic consumption of copper in the first quarter totaled about 224,000 tons, the highest of any quarter since 1929, the American Bureau of Metal Statistics reported yesterday. For the final quarter of 1936 consumption amounted to 211,400 tons and for the first three months of 1936 it was 159,500 tons.

The bureau estimated world production of gold in first quarter at 8,924,000 fine ounces compared with 9,096,000 fine ounces in last quarter of 1936.

World silver production for the first quarter was placed at 43,689,000 fine ounces against 46,982,000 ounces in final three months of 1936. United States production amounted to 21,011,000 ounces. Fgures for Mexico were not included in world totals.

Silver stocks at United States refineries at end of first quarter were 821,000 fine ounces against 1,050,000 on December 31, 1936, and 5,931,000 at beginning of 1932, according to the bureau.

Gold Imports.

The Commerce Department said yesterday that gold imports into the United States in April totaled $215,824,506, compared with $154,370,956 in March and $28,106,110 in April, 1936. Silver imports in April amounted to $2,821,178, compared with $5,589,044 the preceding month and $4,490,222 in April, 1936.

Dividend Increased By G. C. Murphy Co.

New York, May 11 (AP).—G. C. Murphy Co. announced a quarterly dividend today of 80 cents on the common stock, payable June 1 to stock of record May 21. Previous dividend was 65 cents paid March 1.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively, A Special Correspondent.

Stocks Decline in Restricted Volume of Trading; Commodities Lower.

New York, May 11.—Commodities and stocks weakened, the breakup of the speculative front in the former being the more pronounced. Bonds were indifferent. Stocks managed to improve a little toward the close of a day's trading of around three-quarters of a million shares. July wheat ended ⅞ of a cent lower at 115⅝ cents a bushel.

Our markets found nothing in the domestic situation to arouse their enthusiasm over the probability of an early sharp advance, and bullishness was watered down also by the prevailing dullness in London and the weakness in Paris. The settlement in Paris is reported to be catching bulls in uncomfortable position. London has its troubles with the distraction of coronation week, the bus strike and a threatened coal strike, to say nothing of the uncertainties over business conjured up by the recent heavy decline in the markets.

Actual buying and selling of American stocks on foreign account probably is not great enough just now to influence prices greatly, but changes in speculative thought are contagious. The idea seems to be spreading here that Europe no longer regards the American securities market as a sure thing for large profits. So far as investors are concerned, they are in a much better position to judge prospects for American companies than are foreigners, regardless of what may be said about the value of perspective. Those prospects are reasonably good.

Delayed Deliveries.

Stocks opened at prices unchanged or fractionally lower than the previous closing quotations. Activity then promptly subsided and the market dragged to the close. Along the route a little more was dropped from prices here and there. Little took place on the stock exchange floor to attract attention. Steel's opening was fairly large for this market, at 2,000 shares, and the price of 98¼ was down 1¼. After touching a low of 97½ Stel hardened under investment buying, but it was at no time buoyant.

Metal shares were heavy from lack of an appreciative following. Some of them lost a good fraction to a point. The thinness of the market was illustrated by the difficulty, in the last hour, brokers had in bringing buyer and seller together in Chile Copper. A quotation was advertised over the tape at 51½ bid and 60 offered. The stock sold last several weeks at 64.

An unusual number of delayed delivery sales took place at fractionally under those for regular delivery. All but one were 10-day contracts, or about right for an Atlantic trip, but brokers reported no large volume of foreign selling. Among the stocks to figure in delayed deliveries were Water Works, Clark Equipment, Collins & Aikman, Great Northern Ore, Interlake Iron, North American, Pacific Gas, Packard, Republic Steel, Socony-Vacuum, Western Union and Youngstown Sheet.

Mother Lode Drops.

Weakness in Mother Lode contrasted sharply with the recent spurt in the stock to above 3. It sold today around a dollar a share, the market noting the pessimistic predictions on the company's future recently made by its president. The stock offers another example of the desirability of a stock exchange housecleaning in the low-priced regions.

Here and there a stock managed to perk up: B. M. T. recovered a bit and Chrysler gained a point. Railroad shares were a shade firmer most of the time. Stocks to drop 2 to 7 points on one or two sales were Abraham & Straus, American Chain, Corn Exchange Bank, Goodyear preferred, Hercules Powder, Paraffine, Roan Antelope, A. O. Smith and Spear preferred.

Banking Position.

Figures of member banks in leading cities for May 5, revealed that the May 1 increase in reserve requirements forced a good many banks to borrow money, the aggregate of such borrowings, largely in the form of Federal funds, increasing $35,000,000. Of the increase, $29,000,000 was borrowed by New York City institutions. There was also a great shifting about of balances which banks maintained with other banks. "Balances with domestic banks" went down $167,000,000 while the contra item on the liability side "deposits of domestic banks" went down $213,000,000. Demand deposits adjusted decreased $39,000,000, time deposits shrank $9,000,000 and Government deposits $39,000,000. Deposits of foreign banks were $14,000,000 higher.

Loans Increase.

Other changes included a $44,000,000 increase in loans to brokers and a $14,000,000 increase in loans on securities to others; a decrease of $12,000,000 in acceptances and commercial paper increases of $44,000,000 in loans to banks, $14,000,000 in other loans and $1,000,000 in real estate loans. Most of the loans to banks, revealed on the liability side under "borrowings," were made by the New York banks. Holdings of Government securities were down $36,000,000 and investment in Government guaranteed securities decreased $10,000,000. In the period covered by the return the New York City banks disposed of $38,000,000 Government direct obligations and purchased $3,000,000 guaranteed issues. Other securities decreased by $21,000,000, most of the decrease occurring here. Reserves were down $118,000,000. The New York banks lost $132,000,000 but there were gains in some other districts.

Loree Misses First Meeting in 30 Years

New York, May 11 (AP).—Leonor F. Loree, veteran head of Delaware & Hudson Co., set a record today by being absent from the annual stockholders' meeting. Some of the older shareholders said it was the first meeting Loree missed since he became president of the railroad holding company 30 years ago. Fellow officers said he was confined to his home with a slight cold. He is nearing his eightieth year. In Loree's place, his son, J. Taber Loree, vice president, presided. The Loree tradition of a buffet luncheon was observed and the 70 shareholders present enjoyed chicken and lobster salad and ice cream.

ABA President Warns Against Excess Banks

Too Many New Charters, He Says, Would Weaken Whole Structure.

St. Louis, Mo., May 11.—Warning against the danger of chartering too many banks to meet needs for enlarged credit facilities during a period of expanding business was voiced here today by Tom K. Smith, president of the American Bankers Association, in an address before the Missouri Bankers Association.

"The upswing in business activity, however, is accentuating another banking problem," Mr. Smith said. "That problem is the chartering of new banking institutions. The question of charters always becomes active during periods of economic advance. The reasons for the demand for greater banking facilities are easy to understand. During such periods, the demand for credit is great, and to the superficial observer it often seems that the supply is not keeping pace with the demand. More extensive banking facilities then seem to be a logical solution.

"The danger is that such a movement may go too far. If that happens, the supply of trained banking personnel gives out, and inevitably some of the banks are poorly managed. Too many banks, moreover, result in uneconomic competition, not only in interest rates but also for loans. Credit standards are lowered. Thus the unsound unit damages its sound competitor, and the whole structure is weakened.

"It has been pointed out that the existence of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation merely accentuates this evil, since now more than ever the fortunes of sound banks are tied up with those of their less solid neighbors.

The American Security and Trust Company, having been substituted as Trustee by decree entered by the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia on August 12, 1931, in Equity Cause No. 53262, will pay, out of the funds in its possession for such purpose, on and after June 1, 1937, an interest instalment on the bonds above described, from December 1, 1936, to June 1, 1937. The lawful holders of said bonds must present same, accompanied by ownership certificates as required by the United States Income Tax Laws and Regulations, to the undersigned substituted trustee, at its principal office, 15th Street and Pennsylvania Avenue N.W., Washington, D. C., in order that the payment of said interest instalment may be stamped thereon.

Bank of England Buys Gold for Coronation

London, May 11 (AP).—The Bank of England prepared for the rush of coronation business today with the purchase of 4,999,886 pounds sterling in gold bullion (about $25,000,000), against which to issue new pound notes. The demand of coronation visitors for cash is believed to have motivated the purchase, which was reported to have been made from the exchange equalization fund with treasury certificates. The new gold bars brought the bank's gold hoard to £318,661,810 ($1,593,309,050), acording to unofficial figures, which is the highest reserve ever recorded.

Curb Prices Dip In Dull Trading

New York, May 11 (AP).—Bids were lowered on a progressive scale in the curb market today, and while the amount of stock brought out was comparatively small the final prices of many leaders were down fractions to around 2 points. Aluminum Co. of America was the principal standby of the bullish forces. It closed at 132, up 1¾.

Lake Shore Mines was a weak performer among metals closing at 52, off 1⅜. Utility leaders like American Gas & Electric, Electric Bond & Share and Niagara Hudson Power were fractional losers. Declines ranged from 1 to 2 in Pittsburgh Plate Glass at 121; Carrier Corporation 46⅜; Singer Manufacturing 295, and Brazilian Light & Traction 21¼. Transactions totaled 194,000 shares against 217,000 yesterday.

Factory Pay Peak Since Nov., 1929

New York, May 11.—Total factory pay rolls rose sharply in March to the highest figure since November 1929, according to the Alexander Hamilton Institute. The pay roll index, on the basis of 1923-1925 as 100, was 101.2 in March as compared with 95.8 in February and with 77.6 in March last year. The increase over a year ago amounted to 30.4 per cent. Pay rolls in March were nearly three times as high as in the corresponding month of 1933 when the index was 37.9, the lowest figure reached during the depression.

Pay rolls in every industry in March were higher than in the same month last year, with increases ranging from 1.7 per cent in the flour industry to 159.9 per cent in the locomotive industry.

Better Demand Boosts Rents, Says Realtor

Building Costs Mount, National Leader Tells D. C. Group.

A definite quickening in the market for real property was announced to members of Washington Real Estate Board last night by Paul E. Stark, Madison, Wis., president of the National Association of Real Estate Boards. Speaking before more than 200 members of the local organization at Wardman Park Hotel, the national chief executive of realtors, said that rents are approaching the 1926 level, vacancies are being absorbed, and construction costs rising rapidly.

Announcing that one of the important responsibilities of the realtor is promotion of home ownership, and reviewing various Governmental activities in the housing field, he declared the association he heads, believes the fundamental objective of a sound housing policy should be decent accommodations for all income groups.

Such an aim cannot be realized, he explained, unless unnecessary burdens now placed on real estate are removed, these loads being unfair taxation, an interest rate too high and an amortization period too brief.

Citing that the ratio of real estate tax to income in numbers of cities reaches as high as 50 per cent, he emphasized that no other form of wealth is so shackled and burdened by government.

He expressed the firm belief that there can be built for the homes of America a mortgage security which will entitle them to an interest rate of not more than 4½ per cent and an amortization period as long as 30 years.

Herbert U. Nelson, Chicago, executive secretary of the national association, discussed plans for the Central Atlantic conference of realtors in New York City, Friday and Saturday. Morton J. Luchs, acting president of the local board, presided.

Daily Oil Output Drops 8,250 Barrels

New York, May 11 (AP).—Crude oil production dropped 8,250 barrels daily in the week ended May 8, to a daily average of 3,489,200 barrels, the American Petroleum Institute stated today.

Output in California picked up slightly, the entire decline occurring east of that State.

For Investors Who Buy Out of Income

Because such investments are usually in small amounts, the price of the securities to be purchased is important, and low or moderately priced stocks may be the most suitable. Several hundred active stocks listed on the New York Stock Exchange are arranged by price brackets, and classified as to industry, with useful data on earnings in a new booklet—"Price Groups." A copy will be sent upon request to accredited individuals.

$6,500,000 Wilson Issue Offered Today

3¾ Per Cent Debentures Are Priced at 101 Per Cent.

A new issue by Wilson & Co., Inc., Chicago packers, of $6,500,000 convertible 3¾ debentures is being offered today by Edward B. Smith & Co. and Glore, Forgan & Co. The debentures, which are dated April 1, this year, are due April 1, 1947. They are priced at 101 per cent and interest.

The net proceeds will be used to repay short-term loans from various banks and commercial paper brokers, which loans were incurred to finance increases in inventory value and in accounts receivable. The proceeds will be applied as the various short-term loans mature.

Retail Advertising 6.2% Above Last Year

Chicago May 11.—Retail advertising carried in newspapers in 77 leading cities this year through May 1 is 20,096,825 lines ahead of the corresponding period of last year Advertising Age, national advertising newspaper, reported today.

A total of 346,859,116 lines of retail display advertising appeared in newspapers in these 77 major cities in the period reported, against 326,762,291 lines in the corresponding period of 1936, an increase of 6.2 per cent.

$100,000,000 Bills 3.02 Times Subscribed

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau announces that the tenders for two series of Treasury bills, to be dated May 12, 1937, which were offered on May 7, have been opened at the Federal Reserve banks.

Tenders were invited for the two series to the aggregate amount of $100,000,000, or thereabouts, and $302,534,000 was applied for, of which $100,090,000 was accepted.

Maritime Body To End Inland Ship Subsidies

Action Taken to Bolster Construction of U. S. Merchant Marine.

In order to concentrate its activities—and funds—on construction of new and faster ships for operation in foreign commerce, the Maritime Commission yesterday put a ban on financial aid in the building of ships for inland waterways and the Great Lakes.

With approximately $200,000,000 available with which to start its operations, the commission is facing the fact that in three years 90 per cent of the ships in the country's foreign commercial fleet will have reached the age of 20 years, the age limit under the merchant marine act for granting operating subsidies.

Another step announced yesterday was appointment of Grover Loening, of New York, a pioneer in aviation and authority on air transportation, as aeronautical adviser of the commission. He will be in charge of the current investigations into the extent to which provisions of the merchant marine act shall be applied to aircraft, studies pertaining to the possibility of foreign commerce by means of both heavier-than-air and lighter-than-air craft. His first activity in his new post will be participation in the Commerce Department's investigation of the Hindenburg disaster.

Kennedy Announces Ban.

Chairman Joseph C. Kennedy, announcing the ban placed yesterday, said the decision with reference to the Great Lakes will stand "for some time," although the commission at some future date may modify the restriction "when it can be shown conclusively that such aid is warranted and other demands have been considered."

"In recent years," he said, "the United States has lagged far behind other maritime powers in the construction of new merchant tonnage. The majority of ships now flying the American flag were built during or immediately after the World War. Old, slow and costly to operate, their replacement and whatever additional construction is necessary is authorized by the new Merchant Marine act."

Down-Payment Assailed.

Criticism is being heard in shipping circles of the act's provisions that a shipowner must make a down-payment of 25 per cent of the domestic cost of a new ship. The commission is authorized to grant a construction subsidy up to 50 per cent of the difference between the domestic and foreign cost of construction, and to finance 75 per cent of a vessel's cost over a period of 20 years. Shipping men declare the 25 per cent down-payment required of the shipowner is excessive and will tend to retard construction.

Meanwhile, the commission is undertaking to get together data on the basis of which it can advise Congress how much the country's proclaimed policy of an adequate merchant marine will cost.

The construction program is expected to reduce materially the cost of the operating subsidies provided in the new act. Modern ships with up-to-date machinery, it is held, will reduce operating costs required by present, old and slow vessels.

Primaries Sought For Nominations

By the Associated Press.

Congress received a proposal Monday that candidates for President and Vice President be selected through primaries in the States.

Federal primaries would be held in each State on the third Friday of May during presidential years. Voters would mark their preferences for candidates and choose convention delegates. The delegates would be bound by the primary results.

Steiwer said his plan would end "the absolute control by politicians" over selection of the two chief candidates.

He declared voters in a primary election would not be "influenced by enthusiasm engendered by a brass band or by a woman in green waving a flag.

Two Princesses Are Sent to Bed an Hour Early in Preparation for Big Day

Angry Protest Made to Nurse By Elizabeth

Children Use Bed Sheets for Robes Rehearsing Their Parts.

By the United Press.

London, May 11.—The little Princesses Elizabeth and Margaret Rose, who have been busy rehearsing their coronation roles with bed sheets for royal robes and school books for crowns, were put to bed an hour early tonight.

Blue-eyed Elizabeth, who may be crowned some day as queen in her own right, didn't like it a bit. She stamped her foot angrily.

Six-year-old Margaret Rose was silent but round-eyed with excitement as the roar of a cheering throng outside Buckingham Palace's gates carried across the walled courtyard to their nursery windows.

Elizabeth, who is 11, announced to her nurse that "you know we won't sleep a wink" when she was tucked in bed at 7 o'clock. The princesses usually stay up until 8 o'clock, but tomorrow will be such an exciting day. So Queen Elizabeth ordered an early bedtime.

The gorgeous pageantry of the coronation is to Elizabeth and Margaret Rose as thrilling as it would be to any little girls of six and 11—and they are actresses in it.

Rehearse for Weeks.

For weeks they have been playing coronation instead of keeping house with their dolls.

They have arrayed themselves in sheets from the royal linen closets, with books teetering on their curly heads, walking back and forth in the sunlit nursery.

But it hasn't been all fun.

The little princesses have been drilled carefully in the parts they must play. Motion picture films and phonograph music have shown them what their roles will be like.

To Wear Coronets.

They will be up early Wednesday and find two short frilly frocks laid out for them. There will be two miniature purple robes and tiny, lightweight, golden coronets.

Princess Elizabeth, first girl heir to Britain's throne to see her parents crowned, and her sister will wear velvet robes of peeress' rank, complete with coronets.

Their costumes have a modified train, a tiny kirtle of scarlet velvet and a cowl of ermine. The robes and trains, shortened so that little girls can handle them, will be edged in ermine.

Except for the length of the train their costumes will be a replica of those worn by the older peeresses.

After greeting their parents the princesses will ride to Westminster Abbey in a glass coach of state, and there walk hand in hand down the aisle to sit beside their grandmother, Queen Mary, in the first row.

Woodcock to Quit As St. John's Head

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Md., May 11.—Amos W. W. Woodcock announced "reluctantly" today that he had resigned as president of St. John's College, effective next June 30.

His formal statement also revealed officially for the first time that the financial position of the college, third oldest in this country, is not good. It disclosed that the college has a mortgage of $300,000 which falls due next September, that the endowment fund is gone and that the college owes an additional $60,000 that has been "piling up a deficit each year" and that it carries "as an asset about $150,000 of accounts receivable from students which were practically worthless."

Informed sources revealed yesterday that Gen. Woodcock had submitted his resignation effective next June 30. It was not until he issued his formal statement, however, that the reports were officially confirmed.

King George VI and Queen Mary in Coronation Robes

St. Louis Shrine Foes Take Case To High Court

Land Owners Seek Writ to Block Jefferson Memorial.

Thirty-seven embattled property owners of St. Louis, successful since last August in stopping the Government from constructing the proposed $30,000,000 Thomas Jefferson Memorial along the St. Louis water front, took their case to the Supreme Court yesterday.

Edmund H. Toland, of Washington, and David H. Robertson, of St. Louis, attorneys representing the property owners, yesterday petitioned the Supreme Court for a writ of certiorari to the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia.

The long jinx on memorials to Jefferson, apparently still operating, will get a further test if the Supreme Court decides to hear the points of constitutionality said to be involved.

Ickes, Cammerer Named.

The brief filed, naming Harold L. Ickes individually and as Secretary of the Interior, and Arno B. Cammerer, individually and as director of the National Park Service, alleges the petitioners are unwilling voluntarily to sell the real estate which the Government has prepared to condemn for the memorial; that the executive order and Federal statutes involved do not authorize the condemnation of the property—37 city blocks—or expenditure of the moneys involved, but are unconstitutional if they do, and alleges irreparable injury.

Temporary and permanent injunctions are sought against the use of the funds in question or any other funds to buy or condemn the property involved, and for a declaratory judgment establishing lack of authority to proceed.

The brief climaxed a long and bitter legal and political battle over the waterfront memorial in St. Louis. To the $6,750,000 to be allotted by the Government, St. Louis added $2,250,000, making $9,000,000 available at once. The city had a further sum of $5,000,000 available to be added at the rate of $1 for every $3 advanced by the Government.

Many Points Raised.

The points raised against the memorial include:

That the appropriations made from the emergency relief act of 1935, the $4,880,000,000 act, are solely for the purposes of that act and are not authorized to be spent or allocated by the President for the purposes of the subsequently enacted historic sites act, under which the memorial comes. The act is challenged as void and illegal on that ground.

It is further challenged as unconstitutional on the ground that it was an illegal delegation of legislative power by the Congress to the President. If that claim is disallowed, the act is challenged as invalid exercise of the spending power by Congress as not a provision for the general welfare of the United States, but for local welfare of St. Louis citizens, and as an invasion of States' rights.

Men Will Quit Drab Role and Strut to Abbey In Crimson Velvet, Gold Braid and Epaulets

By the Associated Press.

London, May 11.—The conservative male, normally just a drab background for the sartorial splendor of woman, will strut in regal robes at the coronation of King George VI.

The King himself will set the pace. On his way to the Abbey, he will wear a crimson velvet mantle bordered with gold and topped with an ermine cape.

During the crowning, he will appear in a gleaming super-tunic of cloth of gold, and in the final coronation procession, he will don a purple velvet mantle trimmed in gold and ermine.

Even sober Gen. John J. Pershing, so familiar in drab khaki, will add a touch of color to the scene. He will wear a new uniform with a blue coat finished in gold braid and epaulets.

Your peer will appear in a flowing robe, a ruffled collar, silk breeches, a white satin waistcoat and a cocked hat.

A first-class minister who is also a peer will wear the regulation court costume and may also don a dress coatee weighing 8 pounds 8 ounces.

The normal regulation for those who are not peers calls for full uniform or court dress, but the Socialists invited to the ceremony have a rule of their own.

They asked and were granted permission by the Earl Marshal to substitute ordinary evening dress during the ceremony, and to those who know something about the duration and accommodations for the spectators, the simple dress has its advantages.

The spectators inside the Abbey must sit in 19 inches of seat width for approximately seven hours, and there won't even be so much as a seventh-inning stretch.

HollywoodMystery Is Near Solution

Los Angeles, May 11 (AP).—A 15-year-old Hollywood mystery, the slaying of Director William Desmond Taylor, is "nearer solution now than it ever has been," Chief Investigator Eugene Williams said tonight.

His statement came only a few hours after a "clear-me-or-try-me" plea by Mrs. Charlotte Shelby, mother of Mary Miles Minter, former screen star, who was Taylor's fiancee.

Williams said he would question four persons within the next few days. He declined to name them. He said he was "not interested" in the whereabouts of Edward Sands, Taylor's long-missing valet.

George Related To Almost All Europe Rulers

Monarch Is Third Head of House of Windsor; Little Elizabeth Is Heir.

By the Associated Press.

London, May, 12.—King George VI, third sovereign of the House of Windsor, can claim blood relationship with nearly every reigning monarch in Europe.

Descended from the old German House of Hanover through both his father and his mother, George, nevertheless, is a member of the British House of Windsor.

The House of Hanover generally was held to have succeeded that of Saxe-Coburg when Queen Victoria married Prince Albert in 1840. Victoria came to the throne by indirect succession, because her father's elder brothers—sons of George III—died without leaving issue, and her father, the Duke of Kent, also was dead.

Because the Salic law—restricting succession to male members of the royal family—does not operate in England, she took precedence over her father's younger brother, the Duke of Cumberland.

The house of Saxe-Coburg was led George V—father of the monshort-lived. War with Germany arch enthroned today—to announce the foundation of the new House of Windsor. King Edward VIII, who abdicated, was its second head.

Descent of the crown would pass, in the event of the death of King George VI, to Princess Elizabeth, heiress-presumptive—unless, of course, a male heir is born.

After Princess Elizabeth the crown would go to her younger sister, Princess Margaret, then to the Duke of Gloucester, as a younger son of George V; the Duke of Kent and the Duke of Kent's son, Prince Edward.

Japan Considers Accord on China

Shanghai (Wednesday), May 12 (U.P.).—Japanese press dispatches from Tokyo today said the "Little Cabinet"—the ministers of war, navy and foreign affairs—met yesterday "and discussed frankly proposals for Anglo-Japanese co-operation in the economic development of China."

The three ministers also considered measures "to end the current belief in China that Japan and Britain intend to divide China into spheres of economic influence."

Chinese newspapers printed the dispatches with the same prominence they gave the coronation of King George and, at the same time, said editorially that "the elaborate disclaimers appearing in the Japanese capital can be interpreted only as tending to confirm our worst fears."

10 p. m. (5 p. m. Eastern standard time).

Four hundred police officers fought with the Republicans in St. Stephen's Green, where the parade was scheduled to start. Another force drove the people from College Green where a mass meeting was to have been held.

The rioting followed the appearance of President Eamon de Valera in the House of Parliament, where, speaking in the official Irish language, he moved for a second reading of his new republican draft of the Irish Free State constitution, which refuses to recognize even the existence of King George VI.

Shots rang out when police charged a group of men attempting to stage an anti-King meeting near Liberty Hall, Dublin's Labor headquarters.

Republicans attacked police on O'Connell street and began holding a meeting, shouting ridicule of the British King, but civil guard reinforcements arrived, swept through the crowd and arrested the speakers.

Declares People Masters.

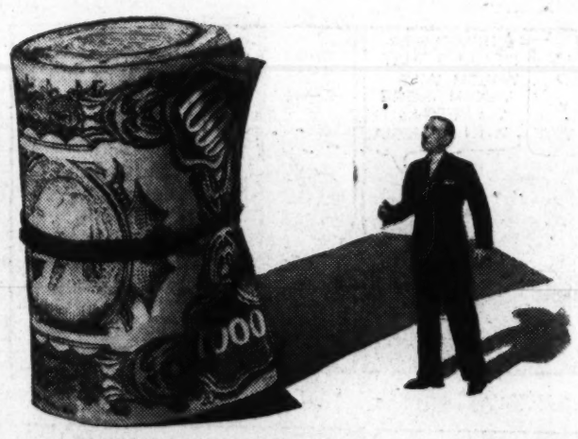
De Valera told the packed House of Parliament in his speech that "this is no question of dictatorship" and that "one thing is clear—the people are masters."

"They will elect the President and give him defined powers, and give Parliament powers as well."

He added that the constitution provides that the people decide their "own form of government and relations with mother countries."

Although tomorrow will be a national holiday throughout the British Empire, and there will be marked celebrations in every country of the crown, the coronation will pass unnoticed in the Irish Free State.

It costs over half a million more to make



IN producing Four Roses, we do many things which some might say aren't strictly necessary. Expensive things. Combined, they cost us over half a million dollars extra a year.

But we'll go right on doing these things. Because they're what make Four Roses so superb in every quality you want.

We achieve this all-round quality by uniting several straight whiskies (and only straight whiskies!) together. They've got to be the noblest kind of straight whiskies—each distilled by the costliest method there is...each a gem for some particular virtue.

Blended together our own special way, these whiskies combine all their virtues into one soul-satisfying liquor. And that, gentlemen, is Four Roses!

"But it costs me so little more to buy!"

"I OWE my friend, Jack, double thanks. First, for introducing me to Four Roses—the grandest whiskey discovery of my life. Second, for opening my eyes to Four Roses' price—only a quarter more a pint than the whiskey I used to buy!"

FOUR ROSES

We Believe Four Roses Is America's Finest Whiskey, Regardless of Age or Price

Frankfort Distilleries, Incorporated, Louisville and Baltimore, also make Paul Jones (92 proof), Old Oscar Pepper brand, and Mattingly & Moore (both 90 proof)—all blends of straight whiskies. Also Paul Jones Four Star Gin (90 proof), distilled from 100% grain neutral spirits.
